Pilsudski Dies: Loss of Dictator Shocks Poland

Officials, Fearing Wide Unrest, Delay Word to the People.

Men Appointed To Fill His Posts

Marshal, 68, Long Foe of Democratic Rule, Was War Hero.

By the United Press.

Warsaw (Monday), May 13.—The Polish people early today were shocked to learn through a delayed official announcement of the unexpected death of Marshal Josef Pilsudski, 68, the re-born Nation's dictator and greatest hero.

Although the marshal died at 8:35 p. m., surrounded by members of his immediate family, and the word was flashed around the world, the government, filled with anxiety at the loss of his firm hand—withheld official word in Poland until 12:30 a. m. today.

An official communique announced his death, emphasizing that his illness had been chronic. It said that Prof. Wankebach, of Vienna, and Polish physicians who had treated Pilsudski, established that he died from cancer of the stomach and liver. An influenza attack ten days ago hastened the end.

Suffers Hemorrhage.

His condition became suddenly worse Saturday when he suffered a hemorrhage, weakening his heart and causing death last night. He received the last sacrament from Father Kornilowicz, an army chaplain.

President Ignacy Moscicki issued a manifesto, saying in part:

"The greatest hero of Polish history is dead. It is the people's duty to cultivate the marshal's inheritance by continuing to build up the might of Poland to which we are pledged by the spirit of our dead marshal and for future generations."

Gen. Zbiguiev Kasprzycki, vice minister of war, officially was elevated to Pilsudski's post as war minister.

The Polish government ordered national mourning, closing all dance halls and public amusements indefinitely. The radio broadcasts today will be limited to news, eliminating the usual musical programs.

Rests in Palace.

Members of the cabinet at 1 a. m. filed past the marshal's body, lying in state in Belvedere Palace, led by the president.

Marshal Pilsudski probably will be buried Thursday at Wawel Castle in Cracow, where many Polish kings and outstanding statesmen have been interred. A state funeral with full military honors was expected.

Marshal Pilsudski's wife, Alexandra, and their two daughters, Wanda, 16, and Jadwiga, 14, were at his bedside when he died.

The cabinet immediately met in extraordinary session to consider funeral plans and the crisis which the dictator's death precipitated in domestic political affairs

At midnight Premier Slawek visited President Moscicki to discuss the manifesto which was to be issued overnight. No official communique concerning the death had been published at that time, although radio programs were interrupted at 11:33 p. m. for the statement that "an announcement of

Nations Move To Block War In Abyssinia

Situation Seen 'Bristling With Danger;' British, French Confer.

By the United Press.

London, May 12.—Political circles tonight were increasingly alarmed at the war threat growing daily as a result of the Italian and Abyssinian border clashes, with both nations reportedly mobilizing.

The present situation was described as "bristling with danger." Some felt pressure on either side by Great Britain might be interpreted as an unfriendly act.

However, those favoring steering clear of "European entanglements" admitted that unless some sort of influence is used by the government the situation suddenly may break out of hand.

French Ambassador Andre Crobin has been a frequent caller at the foreign office. Last Thursday he called and the British Ambassador in Paris, Sir George Clerk, the same day called at the Quai d'Orsay, presumably to discuss action to check the African war threat.

The powers will be in an embarrassing position if they are unable to persuade the two nations to name a conciliation commission before Abyssinia's appeal comes before the League of Nations Council the end of the month.

France and Britain, as members of the council, might be called upon to support a vote of censure against

Searchers Scour Wilds for Plane

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 12.—Searching parties were scouring the mountains of Northwest Rockingham County for a small unidentified plane reported to have fallen soon after noon today in the vicinity of Fulks Run and Bergton.

The plane was reported to have fallen in Grove Hollow, an inaccessible section in the George Washington National Forest near Bergton, 49 miles northwest of here.

The Washington Airport late yesterday reported air-mail planes on the Washington-Charleston, W. Va., had completed their runs without mishap and that any plane missing in Rockingham County, Va., was not connected with the regular air service.

14th St. Area Is Terrorized By Gun Fight

Alleged Burglar 'Shoots It Out' With Law After Chase at Dawn.

Blasting gunfire and screeching sirens terrorized residents along upper Fourteenth street northwest early yesterday, as a suspected housebreaker, running the gauntlet of police bullets, sought refuge on the rear porch of an apartment at Fourteenth and Taylor streets.

In a desperate effort to elude capture, the fugitive battled nearly a dozen policemen, dived head first through the closed window of a first-floor apartment, threatened a man and his wife and a moment later made a mistake which led to his arrest after a hand-to-hand encounted in the dark.

For nearly two weeks Tenth Precinct police had been on the lookout for a lone burglar wanted for at least a score of housebreakings. Special squads were ordered to duty and patrolled streets from Mount Pleasant to Brightwood.

Shortly before dawn yesterday, an excited resident of the Cedric Apartment, 4120 Fourteenth street northwest, telephoned the police station and reported an attempted burglary. An alarm was broadcast and every available policeman dispatched to the scene. Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, was on duty in the neighborhood, and took charge of the search.

Draws Gun, Runs.

The intruder had fled. A systematic search of the neighborhood was started. Policemen E. E. Hall and H. B. Hammersla left the apartment and started down Fourteenth street. Several yards ahead of them walked a lone pedestrian. They shouted. With a quick glance over his shoulder, the man started to run—at the same time drawing a revolver.

At the entrance to an alley near Taylor street, the fugitive turned and opened fire. His pursuers returned shot for shot. Attracted by the noise, other policemen reached the scene and soon a bedlam of volleys shattered the quiet Sunday dawn.

Startled citizens flooded Police headquarters with appeals for aid. The fugitive dashed to the rear porch of an apartment at 4024 Fourteenth street occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James R. Morgan. There he attempted to hold off his would-be captors. Police re-enforcements arrived and sirens added to the din of gunfire.

Neighborhood in Terror.

Bullets rained on all sides. The neighborhood was thrown into turmoil. Terror-stricken residents, aroused from sleep, locked doors and drew their blinds. Parked automobiles were peppered with shots.

As police closed in on the Morgan porch, the suspected burglar, frantic for an avenue of escape, dived through a closed window, smashing the glass and ripping away the screen and window sash. In the Morgan apartment, he turned on a flash light to seek a place to hide.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, awakened by the gunfire and shouting, huddled in their bedroom. Fear that they might be struck by flying bullets finally led them to venture into a hallway for safety. There they encountered the intruder, gun and flashlight in his hand.

Menaced by his weapon, the Morgans retreated into their bedroom and shouted to police from a window. Then, aided by uniformed officers, they climbed from the window and were hurried to shelter.

Realizing escape was blocked, the intruder searched the apartment for a hiding place. He found a door, opened it and walked through, only to find himself in a kitchen pantry.

Tell of Nightmare.

He was discovered a moment later and after a brief truggle with Policemen J. C. Daniels, H. E. Hamilton and Precinct Detective Richard McCarty, surrendered without firing several shots left in his gun.

Describing their experience as a "nightmare," Mr. and Mrs. Morgan told how it felt to face the gun of their unwelcome visitor:

"We were asleep when the shooting started," Morgan related. "My wife thought it was an automobile

Party Chiefs Press Bonus On Roosevelt

Richberg Hit by Liberty League; Farley Probe Up in Senate.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt returned to Washington last night after a weekend trip in the Blue Ridge Mountains ready to plunge again into his work program and the job of pushing his "must" legislation through Congress.

His return was greeted with a deluge of inspired appeals asking him to sign the Patman bonus bill, which is expected to reach his desk by the middle of the week. It was understood, however, that he intends to stand firmly on his determination to veto the measure in its present form.

It is expected that the President will accompany his anticipated veto with a stiff message pointing out that Government spending for relief is being confined to care of the needy and that bonus money would go to many who have jobs. It is expected also that the President will stand firm on his insistence on his "must" legislative program, including NRA extension, social security legislation, holding company legislation, banking legislation and transportation legislation.

President Roosevelt spent his short vacation fishing, motoring and talking beside the fire in the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club, near Hancock, Md., with Democratic congressional leaders. These talks are believed to have accomplished considerable toward an understanding of the immediate congressional program. With the President were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrnes, Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader; Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Postmaster General Farley.

Bonus Compromise Talked.

With the bonus the urgent piece of business now to be cleaned up, there still were persistent reports that the Harrison compromise measure, which is said to be acceptable to the White House, or some other form of compromise might be substituted for the Patman bill if the Senate sustains the Presidential veto. It was argued that the Democratic leaders are particularly eager to dispose of the bonus at this session so that it will not come up before election next year.

Administration leaders claim they have 35 sure votes, three more than necessary to block a motion to override the veto in the Senate. House leaders have abandoned any hope of preventing an overriding vote there.

Threatened with a congressional deadlock, the question of extension of the NRA is looked upon as one of the most perplexing at the moment. It is probable that this question was given considerable attention at the rod and gun club conference. Against the expressed wishes of the President, the Senate Finance Committee has agreed to the Clark resolution extending the NRA only nine months.

Charges Un-Americanism.

In the House Democratic leaders are insisting on a two-year extension. At NRA officials privately are of the opinion that a nine-months extension would be disastrous. They point out that it will take several months to bring about a reorganization and that so short an extension, with no guarantee of the future, would lead to confusion and administrative and enforcement difficulty.

On the other hand, the American Liberty League in its weekly pronouncement yesterday, advocated adoption of the Clark resolution. It suggested that enactment of the resolution would be "the most feasible method for rescuing Ameri-

Destroyers Crash, Plane Lost As Fleet 'Captures' Honolulu

Destroyers Which Crashed During War Games

Warships Lea, Sicard Damaged; Flier From Saratoga Dies.

Secret Maneuver Revealed by Navy

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, May 12.—A destroyer collision which killed one man and injured four and a plane plunge into the sea that took the life of an aviator were revealed here today as casualties in the American fleet's secret mid-Pacific "war" operations.

The casualties were disclosed when 32 of the 153 warships steamed into Pearl Harbor this morning and Admiral J. M. Reeves suddenly lifted the rigid censorship that had shrouded operations since last Thursday.

Simultaneously, Admiral Reeves made known that the 43 planes which took off here last Thursday for a mass flight somewhere in the mid-Pacific area had reached their secret destination safely 1,200 miles westward and were "executing their missions."

Two Dead, Three Hurt.

Naval officers said the great maneuvers had simulated actual war to a surprising extent.

The destroyer Lea tore into the stern of the destroyer Sicard just out of the harbor this morning while leading the bigger ships through an "enemy" network of submarines.

Only prompt work by a damage control officer prevented the Lea from sinking. She moved into harbor under her own steam but her sharp prow was crumpled like a smashed automobile fender.

Helpless, the Sicard was taken in tow by a mine sweeper. She had a great hole in the under side of her fantail stern.

The destroyer collision occurred in inky darkness. They were weaving back and forth to shield the bigger vessels from submarines when the Lea rammed the Sicard.

Plane Sinks Without Trace.

Richard Chadwick, second-class gunner's mate, of Blissfield, Mich., was killed aboard the Sicard; three enlisted men were hurt slightly and another was thrown over the side to suffer from submersion.

Lieut. Mathias B. Wyatt, 26, of San Diego, a native of South Carolina, was a victim of the plane crash, which took place 200 miles east of Hawaii.

Wyatt, in one of 18 fighting planes, had taken off from the aircraft carrier Saratoga to ward off an "enemy" attack of submarines coming out from the islands. His ship flew into the slipstream (currents caused by winds and propellers) of a companion plane. It plummeted down into water 3 miles deep.

The destroyer MacLeish and a plane guard reached the spot one minute after the crash, but the plane had sunk without a trace.

Real War Simulated.

After maneuvering down the coast of Oahu Island precariously close to shore at high speed and in thick darkness, the dreadnaughts steamed into Pearl Harbor this morning, with the flagship Pennsylvania at their head, to end the first phase of the ambitious operations.

Lines of Army planes from Luke and Wheeler fields darted out and began a simulated search for submarines which the big ships were dodging.

Naval officers, claiming they had been in ignorance of the fleet's whereabouts because of the stern censorship imposed by Admiral J. M. Reeves, said the secrecy had been one of the most important feats of naval operations in the history of peace time maneuvers.

"Maneuvers heretofore," they said, "had been a sort of glorified publicity stunt. Everybody knew where the ships were and what they were doing. There was no real atmosphere of warfare. But believe us, we got it this time."

Imports Rise Draws Attack On Crop Curbs

Sen. Vandenberg Assails AAA as Farmers Rally to Its Support.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

As hundreds of Western farmers neared Washington for a mass demonstration in support of the AAA, criticism of New Deal farm policies was directed yesterday at the amount of agricultural products now jumping over the tariff wall into this country.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, often mentioned as a potential Republican candidate for President, is the leader of this new attack. He contends that the volume of farm imports, contrary to opinion at the AAA, is reaching serious proportions.

As the basis for his charges that the Roosevelt foreign trade program is misdirected, he points to a report submitted to the Senate by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. This report shows increases in January and February in almost every category of competitive farm imports.

It was figures showing a significant rise in imports of Japanese cotton cloth that touched off the current debate over the cotton processing tax. Thus AAA officials, already wearied by their long defense of this tax, may shortly find themselves involved in another serious controversy.

Cattle Imports Gain.

The Morgenthau report shows that 43,565 head of cattle were imported during the first two months of this year, compared yith 57,677 for the whole of 1934 and 74,658 for 1933. As an individual example, 5,626 came from Canada during those months, while only 61 were imported for the same period last year.

The political possibilities of this situation, particularly in view of the fact that more than $100,000,000 has been spent to destroy domestic cattle, are expected to induce other Republicans besides Vandenberg to assail the foreign trade and farm programs.

Meantime, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who has regarded the volume of imports as relatively insignificant, has scheduled a radio talk this week in which he may reply to Vandenberg. The Secretary also will speak Tuesday at the mass meeting of sympathetic farmers.

The Treasury figures reveal that imports of butter totaled 3,609,588

Berwyn Blaze In Church Laid To Incendiary

Hand of Arsonist Seen as Investigation of $12,000 Fire Is Sought.

Trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Berwyn, Md., which was destroyed by fire Saturday night, yesterday demanded Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville investigate the possibility that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Dr. A. F. Woods, president of the board of trustees of the church, and J. Fred Keefauver, a member of the board, told the Hyattsville police and the Baltimore Fire Marshal's office that an investigation which they conducted failed to reveal any possible reason for the fire starting "without human assistance."

Church authorities pointed out that the electric switch controlling current in the church was located outside the building, and the the switch had been off since last Thursday evening, when the church sexton, Roy Krause, cleaned the building. No fire had been in the furnace since that time, Krause told the investigators.

Damage yesterday was estimated

House Reopens Quiz of Army Trade Tactics

Some Startling Facts Are Expected by Chairman of Secret Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee was disclosed yesterday to have resumed quietly — behind closed doors—its investigation of War Department business tactics.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, confirmed renewal of the inquiry and spoke of some "startling revelations" that might develop from evidence thus far obtained.

A special counsel giving full time to the investigation has been scrutinizing the affairs of Joseph Silverman, jr., of New York, a dealer in Army surpluses. Contracts in which he was involved were investigated in a District of Columbia grand jury probe last year.

After five weeks of study, the jury declined to return any indictments, but handed over a transcript of the testimony to the military committee.

The present inquiry, McSwain said, involves not only Silverman,

Five Men Killed By Mine Blaze

6 More Hurt at Fairmont; Victims Include Welsh Hero Decorated by King.

By the United Press.

Fairmont, W. Va., May 12.—Five miners died today in hospitals of burns received in a $250,000 fire early today at the Barrackville mine of the Bethlehem Mines Corporation. Six others are in hospitals here.

No men were in the mine when the fire was discovered. A safety crew was organized and descended through the air shaft to fight the blaze at the base.

They were near the bottom of the shaft when supporting timbers burned, allowing tons of rock and debris to fall, causing a small explosion.

The dead—D. W. Jones, 28, assistant safety director of the mine; Terry Welty, 40, a section boss; Harry West, 30, a timberman; L. A. Howell, 50, mine inspector, and Jay Wells, 50, a pumper.

All the others were badly burned and suffered shock. All the men are married and have children. The mine employs about 900 men.

Howell, a native of Wales, once was decorated by King George V for heroic rescue work in an English mine.

Roosevelt's Mother Honored As Entire U. S. Observes Day

From Sing Sing to White House, Country Pays Tribute; Services Held at Arlington and in D. C. Pulpits.

Americans bethought themselves of mother yesterday, remembering her with messages, flowers and prayers.

Some there were who scoffed at Mother's Day, characterizing it as a scheme to boost sales. But most Americans went ahead and observed it anyway, moved by the same tenderness that Whistler placed on canvas and Kipling put in verse.

It was a day observed by rich and poor, famous and infamous.

The day was observed in virtually all Washington churches. From the pulpits came eulogies for the Blessed Mother and those other mothers who down the centuries have loved, suffered and sacrificed.

In Arlington National Cemetery, where a benign sun bathed the green and white-flecked hills, the American War Mothers gathered at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Flowers were piled high on the tomb, and tributes were paid to all mothers robbed of their sons by war.

In New York, according to the Associated Press, Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, pinned a medal on Mrs. Fletcher M. Johnson, selected by the Golden Rule Foundation as the "typical mother of America for 1935."

In Sing Sing Penitentiary, 20 miles away, Mrs. Eva Coo, awaiting the electric chair for murder, sent a greeting to her aged mother in Canada. And some inmate in the prison sent a greeting to Mrs. Coo.

Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt and the daughter for whose custody she fought—11-year-old Gloria—attended mass in New York at the Church of St. Francis of Assisi. Mrs. Vanderbilt, the Associated Press said, was attired severely in black, Gloria in blue.

Lamp Left for Absent Father Fires Home; Family of 5 Dies

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., May 12.—A young mother and her four children were burned to death in their beds early today because firemen thought the family was away from home.

Apparently overcome by smoke as they slept, the five died in second-flour bedrooms as the firemen, oblivious of their presence, battled flames that ruined a farm home near the village of Stanton, 6 miles east of here.

The dead:
Mrs. Alice Newcomb, 27.
Walter Newcomb, 6.
Pearl Newcomb, 3.
Nora Newcomb, 2.
David Newcomb, 17 months.

Their charred bodies were removed from the ruins of the two-story stone building after the flames died down. No search was made before then because a neighbor said he had seen the family leave the house last night. When a check-up showed the mother and children had not visited relatives here, the tragedy was disclosed.

The husband and father of the dead, Frank Newcomb, 28, was found lying on the lawn in a dazed condition. He told police he had visited a neighbor, John Ferguson, and returned home shortly before midnight to find the house in flames.

Frazier-Lemke Law Decision Is Likely Today

By the Associated Press.

A decision potentially affecting $12,000,000,000 in farm debts and further illuminating the Supreme Court's attitude toward various New Deal proposals is expected today from that tribunal.

It will say whether or not the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act is constitutional—whether the "due process" guarantee of the basic law is violated by the enforced reduction in the amount of debt.

The court already has held valid a State law with some points of similarity, dropping to do so into the familiar five-to-four alignment which has come to be expected when issues involving the perennial liberal vs. conservative viewpoint are up for decision.

Dissimilar Points.

While supporters of the Frazier-Lemke act draw encouragement from the court's ruling sustaining the Minnesota mortgage moratorium law, the dissimilar points are giving them some uneasy moments.

The Federal statute in question enables a farmer to prevent by court action foreclosure on a mortgage on his property for a period of five years. Meanwhile, he pays a rental fee and is given an opportunity to discharge the debt in full upon payment of the farm's appraised value.

In the Minnesota case, the law merely increased from one year to three the period in which a farmer had the right to regain title by redemption of the mortgage. The act was phrased to expire automatically two years after enactment.

Act Is Temporary.

A majority of the court held that a State's authority to act in time of crisis for the good of all was paramount, but emphasized that the act was temporary.

The Frazier-Lemke law contains no expiration provision. Its supporters contended it sets up a valid method of easing farm debts through court procedure, but they eyed apprehensively the five-four decision of last Monday invalidating the railway pension act and hinting that a majority of the court is inclined to place a strictly literal interpretation upon the "due process" clause protecting property.

Dr. White to Speak On Parole System

Head of Hospital Talks Today to Psychiatrists.

Juvenile courts and the parole system will be discussed by Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital at the ninety-first meeting this morning of the American Psychiatric Society meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. White is vice president of the society and chairman of its section on forensic psychiatry, before which he will speak this morning.

Hugh H. Clegg, of the Department of Justice, will address the same meeting on investigative work, with particular emphasis on kidnaping cases.

Other Washingtonians who will address various sections of the society in its five-day meeting are Dr. Hugh S. Brenton; Maj. Edgar E. Hume, librarian of the Army Medical Corps, and Dr. Roscoe W. Hall. The George Washington University Glee Club will entertain the delegates at the annual dinner on Wednesday evening.

Many nationally known psychiatrists will conduct studies at St. Elizabeths in the course of the convention.

Switzes in Hiding After Spy Acquittal

Couple Moving Secretly Since Receiving Threats.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Switz fear vengeance at the hands of friends of those jailed on the Americans' testimony in the recent spy ring case, it was disclosed today.

Because of threats, the couple have been on the move ever since they won freedom by giving testimony convicting their co-defendants.

The action of the American State Department in canceling their passports was a new shock to Mr. and Mrs. Switz, friends said.

For the first week after their trial they lived in a Paris apartment, but telephonic threats from anonymous friends of the convicted spies sent them elsewhere. Police and Richard C. Ammerman, their attorney, are shielding their whereabouts.

Between You and Me

Public Fear of Inflation Assayed. G. O. P. Firmness to Right Grows; Wallace Answers Huey.

—By Raymond Clapper

THE psychology for starting the printing presses is building up faster than anyone would have dreamed a short time ago.

We have as a Nation prided ourselves on the fact that we were flexible enough to revalue the dollar and to experiment with gold and silver prices, but that we always had ourselves under control and could stop short of starting the printing presses.

We could take our liquor or leave it alone. Never would we resort to printing money out of thin air. There has been an underlying confidence to that effect which has held the country's currency system on an even keel through the period of experimentation.

• • • •

But dangerous signs are appearing. Two such responsible officials as Governor Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board and Chairman Jesse Jones, of the R. F. C. have said in effect that the issuance of $2,000,000,000 in paper money to pay the bonus should accasion no alarm.

If that is sound, why not speed up the printing presses by a few more revolutions per minute and pay the $4,880,000,000 works appropriation by the same method? Why not go even further and print up enough money to pay off the $28,000,000,000 interest-bearing debt of the Government? That would cut off a heavy interest burden. You hear this seriously argued. Whether the Patman bill is passed over the President's veto or not, from now on you will hear Eccles and Jones quoted in support of every sort of inflationary proposal to turn out printing press money for one purpose or another.

We are, unless the signs are misleading, in the first stages of embracing an idea that once was repugnant. We are gliding into acceptance of the theory that when the Government wants money, it is not necessary to go out and borrow it, or raise it by painful taxation, but that it is only necessary to telephone the Bureau of Printing and Engraving to send up another truckload of paper money.

Economists can argue this on paper and can make a presentable case. But it is one that overlooks the human factor, and the fact that when people begin to distrust the underlying soundness of the currency, there is trouble ahead.

• • • •

Fear is one of the primary instincts of man. It ranks along with hunger and sex as one of the great basic forces of life. It is peculiarly dangerous because of its contagious quality. Fear spreads in a herd in geometrical ratio, mounting in intensity in its sweep. This is true of man as well as beast. Anyone who ever has seen a bank run knows what happens when fear seizes a mass of people. The prairie fire spread of runs which led up to the bank holiday was caused by uncontrolled fear which swept from one community to another.

• • • •

Something which is basically the same seizes upon a nation when it begins to doubt its currency. Throughout our history, a thing that has been taught in practically every schoolroom is that printing press or flat money is dangerous. Whether it is or not dangerous per se doesn't matter. If a majority of the people think it is dangerous that very fact makes it so because it can not command the public confidence necessary to support it. To overlook this traditional attitude of the American public is to overlook a factor which is just as important, perhaps more so, than the cold-blooded mechanics of the monetary structure.

• • • •

Suppose the fear of printing press inflation should seize the country. What would happen? If past experience is any guide, prices would begin to shoot up perpendicularly. Everyone would rush to get rid of his money by buying goods. Merchants and traders would rush duplicate orders. Householders would buy anything rather than keep the money. Wages and salaries could not possibly keep up with the rapid rise of prices. Finally you would wipe out the currency and start over again. That is the extreme picture. It happens only when inflation gets out of control. An effort is made to prevent it from getting out of control but when a whole nation becomes frantic, controls snap under the pressure. You are neck-deep in the thing before you know it.

And the most disturbing sign of all is that officials of responsibility can speak so casually and calmly about starting the printing presses. It is a sign that they are slipping off into a trance. When a former Secretary of the Treasury, McAdoo, begins to refer to $2,000,000,000 as a handful of sand on the beach—a sum equivalent to $2 for every minute of the Christian era—and finds support in high places it is a sign that we are losing our sense of proportion.

This is the time, if there ever was one, when those who recently were clamoring about the gold standard and baloney dollars really have a job to do.

Nothing reveals the inner conflict in the Republican Party better than the simultaneous utterances of two able Kansas leaders of the party.

John D. M. Hamilton, young red-headed Kansas national committeeman, recently selected as assistant to National Chairman Fletcher, says he wants no "fair-weather Republicans," meaning those Republicans who have shown sympathy for the New Deal, to be delegates to the Mid-west party rally to be held at Springfield, Ill., June 10 and 11. He wants only "honest-to-goodness Republicans."

At the same time another prominent Kansas Republican, Senator Arthur Capper, who was once described as a man who kept both ears on the ground at the same time, in a signed editorial in Capper's Weekly, defends his attitude in supporting numerous New Deal measures and predicts that the country will neither entirely repudiate it in 1936, nor entirely indorse it.

"It has always been my aim," he says, "to legislate as a representative of Kansas, and as a member of the Senate of the entire United States, rather than as a narrow partisan. And that is the course I expect to pursue."

In this Senator Capper follows closely the course of the Republican Senate leader, McNary, and of a leading presidential possibility, Senator Vandenberg, and of his own Kansas Governor, Landon, who also is a presidential possibility.

Hamilton unquestionably reflects the growing stiffening of Republicans in control of the party machinery as distinguished from such men as Capper, McNary and Vandenberg. It is plain that the attitude expressed by Hamilton will dominate the Springfield rally. Whereas the tendency a few months ago was to liberalize the party, the tendency now among those holding strategic positions in the organization, is to keep well over to the right. This disposition has been strengthened by the temper of the recent United States Chamber of Commerce meeting, whose resolutions could stand as a party platform for the right wing Republicans.

Secretary Wallace titled his Saturday speech in Louisiana, "Licking the Ghost of Alexander Hamilton." But his real subject was, "Licking the Bogey of Huey Long."

Recently Long went to Des Moines, Wallace's home town, and called the Secretary "Henry God Almighty Wallace, the ignoramus from Iowa."

The mild young Secretary now goes to Long's Louisiana farmers and tells them how many million dollars AAA is bringing them. In other words, without saying so directly, he reminds them that while the Kingfish promises to share the wealth, the Roosevelt Administration actually is doing it.

Bankers Await Speech Tonight By Morgenthau

Business Interests Also Expect an Important Announcement.

By the United Press.

Inability of the Treasury to carry out the silver purchase mandate of Congress in the face of soaring gold stocks led financial and business interests last night to look for an important pronouncement regarding monetary policy from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Morgenthau is scheduled to address the Nation at 10 p. m. today on "The American Dollar." The Treasury's announcement of the impending speech said it would be a review of New Deal monetary policies, but there was no further hint of what the Secretary might say.

Observers believed that Morgenthau probably would make one of his most important pronouncements, and also seek to refute critics of the Administration's policies.

The silver purchase act of 1934 directs the Treasury to buy silver until the Government's holdings represent one-third the value of its gold stocks, or until silver reaches the price of $1.29 an ounce. No time limit was set, however.

Recently the gold stock has increased so fast the Treasury has been unable to carry out the silver program. The Government's gold holdings are valued at more than $8,000,000,000, more than at any time in the Nation's history.

Purchases of silver have been made from abroad but they caused a protest from China. That nation complained that American purchases were draining away the basis of China's currency.

More recently the Treasury twice increased the price it paid for newly mined domestic silver, lifting it to its present figure of 77.57 cents in order to give domestic producers a premium over what they could get in world markets. When the market price rose and crossed the Treasury price, however, no further action was taken and the market price subsided.

Observers regarded it as possible that Morgenthau might announce some plan to solve the silver problem and to end uncertainty over monetary policies in this respect.

Farm Housewives Buying Once More

Kitchen Utensils and Furniture Purchases Gain.

Farm housewives are once more able to buy kitchen utensils and household furniture denied them because of depleted purchasing power, a study by the AAA of railroad waybills indicated yesterday.

A study of carlot shipments over four important Southeastern railroads of manufactured goods for domestic and personal use during the year after the farm recovery program became effective, showed substantial gains, it was reported.

Shipments of stoves and heaters increased 83.7 per cent, refrigerators 148.7 per cent, tables 1,010.7 per cent, chairs 121.1 per cent, sewing machines 182.2 per cent, kitchen cabinets 125.1 per cent, bookcases and desks 79.1 per cent, electric lamps and fixtures 85 per cent, radios and radio parts 69 per cent and miscellaneous furniture 40.4 per cent.

Inquirendo Club Elects Caldwell

Louis G. Caldwell, attorney, has been elected president of the Inquirendo Club, succeding E. Barret Prettyman, corporation counsel.

J. Gilmer Korner was named vice president; Stanley Suydam secretary-treasurer and Joseph Conrad Fehr, chairman of the executive committee. Together with Camden R. McAtee, they comprise the executive committee.

The club's annual dinner will be held May 22 at the Mayflower.

United Jewish Appeal Holds Rally Tomorrow

Results of three days canvass for funds in the United Jewish Appeal will be announced tomorrow at the first drive luncheon at the Jewish Community Center. The leaders of the men's division, Edward Ostrow and Dr. Ivy Pelzman, will serve as hosts, and Rabbi Irving Miller, of New York, will be the guest speaker.

The $35,000 drive for European relief and Palestine reconstruction gained momentum over the week-end with the recruiting of additional volunteer workers and with pledges of support received from several more organizations.

Jean Griffith Burial Tomorrow in Arlington

Funeral services for Miss Jean V. Griffith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl H. Griffith and a niece of Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington baseball team, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the W. W. Chambers Co. funeral home at 1400 Chapin street northwest.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Miss Griffith was a Red Cross nurse during the World War and will be given military honors.

2 Killed as Train Jumps Tracks in Alabama

Eufaula, Ala., May 12 (AP).—O. C. Gates, engineer, of Macon, Ga., and a Negro fireman were killed near here when a Central of Georgia combination passenger and freight train left the tracks.

Four freight cars in front of the lone passenger coach were wrecked, but the passenger car did not leave the tracks and none of the passengers was injured.

Old Foundation Discovered Of Ponce de Leon's Casa Blanca

National Geographic Society Traces Seeker of Fountain of Youth and Reports Place Now Pointed Out as His Home Post-Dated Him.

By the Associated Press.

The explorative tracks of the romantic "seeker of the fountain of youth"—Juan Ponce de Leon—have been traced by the National Geographic Society with discovery of the ancient foundations of Casa Blanca in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The existing structure, pointed out to visitors as the home of the adventurous explorer of Spanish Main days, was found to have been built after the death of De Leon, who was reported to have sailed with Columbus on his second voyage to the Americas in 1493.

"The events of Ponce de Leon's life," the society said today, "are written deep in the geography of the New World he helped to create. His name appears on every map of the Caribbean."

The society said he first was successful in subduing the natives of Hispanola (Haiti) and shortly thereafter was made Governor of Higuey, the island's eastern province.

"Rumors of gold, hidden in those mountains," the society said, "lured him across the channel. There he found rich lands, friendly Indians and the promised gold. To him it was truly Puerto Rico—'Port of Riches'—and so he named it and became governor.

"By enslaving the Indians and exploiting the island's natural resources, John Ponce soon amassed a fortune. He built and fortified the town of San Juan, erected a magnificent palace overlooking the harbor and ruled his lands sternly."

New Battle Looms On Illinois Taxes

Homer Again to Seek Fund for State Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 12.—Illinois' 1,200,000 unemployed tightened belts today for a week of restricted, but sufficient, diet as preparations continued for another legislative battle over the 3 per cent sales tax.

With minimum food requirements for a seven-day period assured by final disbursement of Illinois Emergency Relief Commission funds, just before that body shut up shop here Saturday, interest again centered on factional lines in the State House of Representatives.

There Tuesday, Gov. Henry Horner seeking to meet Federal demands that Illinois contribute $3,000,000 monthly to pay one-third of the cost of providing for its jobless, will try once more for passage of the sales tax measure designed to raise the sum.

Already halted three times in the House, observers predicted the acrimonious argument might reach a new peak. Administration leaders were busy over the week-end trying to line up the 102 votes required for emergency passage of the bill, already approved in the State Senate.

American Missionary Is Missing in China

Hongkong, May 12 (AP).—Missionary circles here were informed today that Father Harold Bush, American missionary, had failed to return to his station at Shakchin, northern Kwangtung Province, after visiting friends in nearby mountains.

Reports that he had been kidnaped could not be confirmed.

A dispatch to the State Department in Washington said Father Bush, a native of Medford, Mass., was believed to be in the hands of kidnapers.

Police Heeding Alarm Find Suspect in Store

Police who answered a burglar alarm in the fur store of William Rosendorf at 1215 G street northwest early yesterday found Elijah Williams, 19, colored, sitting under a stairway with three fur coats, valued at $650, in his arms. He is held for investigation.

A rear door in the home of Mrs. Bertha Folston, 506 Twenty-second street northwest, was forced sometime early yesterday and $100 stolen, she reported to police.

Leftists Appear Victors In Election at Paris

Paris, May 12 (AP).—Returns in the second day of balloting in municipal elections indicated a heavy victory in Paris by Leftists.

Early results of the run-off vote in districts where candidates failed to obtain the necessary majority last Sunday showed nearly four out of five seats were captured by the Left.

The voting was orderly with the only excitement again furnished by suffragists, who burned "bonds" on the site of the famous Bastille prison as a token of their determination to win the right to vote.

Standing Board Urged to Solve Mills' Troubles

Temporary Group Advises President to Set Up Arbitration Board.

Recommendations that President Roosevelt appoint a permanent cotton textile work assignment board were made yesterday in a report of the temporary board appointed by the President last year to make a study of working conditions in textile mills.

It was suggested that the board be composed of representatives of employers and employes and that it investigate machine assignments in instances in which there are disagreements. It was argued that such a board would afford a means of appealing differences and would lessen the probability of strikes.

The board in its report found that a great majority of employers have not set up machine assignments that create excessive work loads.

Members of the board making the report were W. A. Mitchell, chairman; Geoffrey C. Brown, employes' representative, and Earle R. Stall, employers' representative.

Meanwhile, Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, announced that the organization would appeal to the National Labor Relations Board from the decision of the Cotton Textile Labor Relations Board in favor of the Callaway Mills, LaGrange, Ga., accused by the union of violation of section 7(a) of the recovery act.

Mr. Gorman said the appeal would result in a "test of the whole attitude of the Government and its machinery."

D. C. Episcopalians to Make Virginia Pilgrimage Tomorrow

Celebration of Diocese to Be Observed at Convention.

Interested in the movement to restore the 167-year-old Lamb's Creek Episcopal Church in King George County, and in sesquicentennial festivities for the Diocese of Virginia, many Washington Episcopalians will make a pilgrimage tomorrow to two sites significant in Virginia church history.

The local church men and women will attend the annual convention and sesquicentennial celebration of the Diocese of Virginia in St. Paul's Church, east of Fredericksburg, which was erected in 1766.

In the Washington group will be the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church in Georgetown, whose brother, the Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, jr., D. D., of Richmond, Va., will be one of the speakers.

The parties will also visit the Lamb's Creek Church, near Fredericksburg, which was erected in 1769, and for which restoration funds are now being raised.

The celebration, which will be conducted in conjunction with the convention, will mark the 150th anniversary of the organization of the Virginia Episcopal diocese.

Prominent Episcopalian clergymen will address the delegates at St. Paul's Church. Among them will be the Right Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, D. D., Bishop of Southern Virginia; the Rev. G. MacLaren Brydon, D. D., historiographer of the diocese; the Right Rev. Frederick D. Goodwin, D. D., bishop coadjutor of the diocese.

Tuesday night services linked with the convention will be conducted in St. George's Church, in Fredericksburg. The Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, jr., D. D., rector of St. Paul's Church in Richmond, Va., will speak.

East London Throngs Cheer Visiting Royalty

By the United Press.

London, May 12.—King George and Queen Mary took their little granddaughter, Princess Elizabeth, on a surprise drive through the crowded East End at 3 p. m. today and were nearly swamped by a throng of enthusiastic, cheering thousands.

The news of their presence spread swiftly through the district, and the crowds turned out blocking the streets. Two police cars cleared the way, however, and the King and Queen seemed to enjoy the demonstration of popular affection at the end of silver jubilee week.

They drove slowly through the crowds, returning to Buckingham Palace without incident.

Fate Like Reich Seen for U. S. UnderBankBill

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 12.—The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York in a pamphlet issued today attacked the banking bill of 1935 and declared its passage would remove the final barrier to a course of uncontrolled inflation such as experienced in Germany.

"It is not contended that underlying conditions in this country are directly comparable to those that resulted in the collapse of the mark or that the adoption of the amendments to the banking laws under discussion would necessarily mean that the United States would follow in the footsteps of Germany," the bank declared.

"The passage of the present bill would mean, however, that the final barriers to such a course had been removed, and that, under pressure of continuing Government deficits, the road to inflation would become more inviting, more dangerous, and more imminent."

Warns of Politics.

William C. Potter, chairman of the Guaranty board, in a letter to stockholders, called attention to the pamphlet and said, "Title 2 of the proposed act, which is the most important and the most dangerous part of the measure, would virtually place control of the Federal Reserve banks, not only through the Federal Reserve Board but also through the governors of the various Federal Reserve banks themselves, 'in the hands of political appointees * * *.'"

The pamphlet continued: "It is important to observe that this sweeping extension of political control over the banking system would occur at a time when the Government is under great political pressure by advocates of inflation, when the Federal budget is far out of balance, and when the Treasury depends largely on the banks for its current funds.

"It perhaps would be unfair to imply that it is the deliberate intention of the sponsors of the bill to convert the Federal Reserve System into an agency of inflation.

Control Sought Is Charge.

"But the result of the bill would be to increase the danger of such development by removing some of the existing checks to credit expansion and substituting political control.

"In practice, the assumption of control over any central bank by any Government, particularly at a time of financial pressure on the public treasury, has repeatedly resulted in the subjection of banking policy to the fiscal needs of the government; and the eventual outcome has been outright inflation, with its attendant debasement of currency and credit . . .

"It seems obvious that the real purpose of this proposed legislation is not further to ease the money market or to create additional credit, but to give any Administration complete control of the Reserve System's bond-buying policy, and thus to provide for the contingency that might arise in case continued spending and borrowing should impair Government credit and drive from the market private banks and other investors who were no longer willing to buy evidences of the Government deficit.

"For those who see no danger in clearing the way for the Treasury to sell securities to the Federal Reserve banks in large amounts, it may be of intersest to consider that, in the great German inflation of the 1920s, the principal expansion of currency was in the form of notes of the Reichsbank issued against interest-bearing obligations of the German government."

Italy. The censured state invariably is antagonized and Italy might bear the grudge of such action for years, increasing an already dangerous tension in continental affairs.

Britain and France were believed considering whether any useful purpose could be served by joint representations urging Italy and Abyssinia to hasten their naming of conciliators, enabling settlement of the dispute without public acerbity.

Judges Are Announced In Definition Contest

Dr. Raymond F. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland; John S. White, Prince Georges County member of the Maryland House of Delegates, and Mrs. Harvey W. Rise in Imports Draws Attack On Crop Curbs in pounds, $645,231 in value, for January and February, compared to 98,172 and $15,794 for the same period last year, and 1,107,020 and $183,444 for the whole of 1934.

A similar increase is shown in imports of tallow. The United States imported 31,615,534 pounds of tallow during the first two months of 1935, compared to 42,813,299 for all of 1934, and only 238,562 for 1933.

Grains Also Increase.

Imports of corn totaled 3,713,035 bushels in January and February, 2,959,065 in 1934, and 160,288 in 1933. Oats came in at the rate of 3,762,014 bushels in January and February, 5,580,407 last year, and 132,337 in 1933.

The figures for barley were 1,250,539 bushels the first two months of 1935, 6,579,767 in 1934, and 24,282 in 1933. For rye, the report showed 2,185,531 in January and February, 7,622,032 last year, and 8,005,796 in 1933. A somewhat smaller increase is shown for wheat.

Mindful of the interest of agriculture in vegetable oils, Vandenburg informed the Senate last week that coconut-oil cake is being imported at the rate of 134,000,000 pounds annually, compared with 21,000,000 pounds in 1933, and that cottonseed-oil cake is averaging 312,000,000 pounds this year, compared with 7,000,000 pounds in 1933.

"We are trying to go in two opposite directions simultaneously," he declared, "when we build up our domestic production costs artificially, and yet deliberately tear down the tariff protection behind which those costs must be reared."

Seen As "Drop In Bucket."

The Senator argued for the two-price system and higher tariffs as the only solution to the farm problem. Under this plan, domestic prices would be maintained by operation of the tariff, while crop surpluses would be sold abroad, through bilateral barter arrangements, at whatever figure they might bring.

At the AAA, the increase in farm imports was declared "a drop in the bucket" by one official, who laid most of the blame on the drought. Imports of all grains from July 1, 1934, to the end of February, this year, were six-tenths of 1 per cent of the average American production, it was declared.

For example, the 6,510,000 bushels of corn imported during that period compared with an average annual production of $2,500,000,000 bushels, it was said. Nevertheless, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics stated in its report this week that shipments of Argentine corn tended to weaken the market for that commodity.

All the agricultural imports are subject to heavy duties, which means that the American price must exceed the world price by that much margin before farm products can be sold profitably here. The tariff on wheat, is 42 cents; corn, 25 cents; oats, 16 cents; barley, 20 cents; rye, 15 cents, and beef, 6 cents a pound.

AAA Farm Boosters Push On to D. C. Rally

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 12.—On to Washington to "back Henry Wallace and the AAA," a group of Midwestern farmers pushed on by bus today after a brief stop here.

Arriving in the early morning from Nebraska, the party of 62, representing, they said, corn, hog and wheat AAA contract signers from 75 counties of their State, was up and going after only a few hours' rest.

In the National Capital they will join between 2,000 and 3,000 other farmers from Midwest, Southwest and Southern States in urging that Congress continue and strengthen the crop-control law.

"We are going to Washington to offset the propaganda against the Triple A, and we intend to support Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to the limit," said F. L. Robinson, of Kearney, a leader of the group.

If He Saws in Cell, He'll Have Audience

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, May 12.—If Ted Cole saws out of the county jail, the escape itself will be broadcast.

Young Cole, held on Federal charges, has made himself more or less of a nuisance through his attempts to escape distasteful confinement. He has been transferred to a new cell, especially done over for his benefit, with an outside cage of tool-proof metal and a loud speaker hooked up so that the sound of his least movement will be amplified throughout the jail.

"If Cole turns over," said the man who installed the loud speaker, "it will make him sound like a steel barrel falling downstairs.

"If he sighs, it will sound like the wind in the woods.

"If he saws—by golly, it will sound like he is sawing."

but also two kinsmen and several Army officers.

The exact course of the new search was concealed. But it was learned that W. Frank James, the committee counsel, recently had a truck and two trunks filled with records brought to Washington.

Silverman himself then was called before a small group of members. McSwain said he might be asked to testify again shortly.

The grand jury investigation carried the name of Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, onto the front pages as the most prominent witness. Woodring barred Silverman from the department during the course of the proceedings.

Silverman was reported to have told the grand jury he had a two-way contract to sell back 700,000 suits of underwear to the War Department at the price he paid for them. In return, he said, he received assurance he would be permitted to buy other excess supplies for which the Army had no use.

The underwear deal, he said, would have saved the Government $700,000.

The military committee took up an investigation of War Department expenditures under orders from the House. It was as a result of that inquiry that Secretary Dern recently delivered a stinging message of censure to Col. Joseph I. McMullen, of Washington, for having private business relations with parties interested in War Department business affairs.

to find out what was up so they could get ready, but failed.

Though the censorship was lifted, war time conditions prevailed at Pearl Harbor and adjacent Fort Kamehameha.

Cameras were barred. Soldiers paced the beaches near the harbor mouth.

A tugboat hired to take newsmen and photographers out to the fleet was warned to keep 1½ miles away.

It was expected, however, that several thousand officers and men would be given shore leave here and that the ships would put to sea again perhaps by Tuesday, after which the entire fleet might return here later this month and attempt mass docking in Pearl Harbor as an experiment.

No Clew on 45 Planes.

The high command left no clue as to the "secret destination" of the 45 planes that figured in last Thursday's unprecedented aerial operations starting here. The only information given out was that they had gone "1,200 miles westward."

Ostensibly they were heading for Midway Island, 1,323 miles west and north of here, at take-off time, but if any of them reached Midway Island the fact was kept secret.

The only known landing place in the vicinity of "1,200 miles westward" is Pearl and Hermes Reef, a coral formation about 100 miles this side of Midway. The reef offers enough quiet water for a seaplane fleet of the size.

Liquor Revenues Total Half Billion

Doran Reveals Federal, State Gains by Repeal.

Prohibition repeal has added nearly $500,000,000 to State and Government revenues, James A. Doran, administrator of the Distilled Spirits Institute, said yesterday.

Mr. Doran's figures show the following estimated State receipts:

Farm Hand Is Injured In New Market Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 12.—Ben Knupp, 48, farm laborer, is unconscious in the hospital here with a fractured skull, broken leg, and other injuries suffered early this morning when struck by an automobile on the Valley pike near New Market.

Knupp was walking from New Market to his home near Timberville when hit by a machine driven by A. B. French, of New Market. French, who took the man to the hospital, said he did not see him until he appeared in front of the car. No charges have been preferred against French.

Coroner's Jury Frees Driver in Fatal Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 12.—Following more than two hours' deliberation, a coroner's jury here yesterday absolved Frederick W. Ogden, of Pittsburgh, Pa., from blame in the death of Stanley H. Sundergill, of Unionville, Md., who was fatally injured when the machine he was driving and a truck operated by Ogden collided near Eldersburg, Carroll County, on May 4.

Sundergill, who was a resident of Frederick County was a deputy collector of internal revenue.

Senate Afraid Of Huey Long, Women Charge

2,000 of His Native State Demand Airing of Overton Case.

Louisiana women sailed into Huey Long here yesterday with a charge that he has terrified the Senate into obscuring charges made against him by its own committee.

"Slowly but surely it is dawning upon the American people that the Senate is afraid of Huey Long," said a public letter signed by Hilda Phelps Hammond, chairman of the women's committee of Louisiana.

"Regarding Mr. Long's conduct," the letter said, "Senator Robinson has said: 'It is about time that the manhood in the Senate should assert itself.' We say it is long past time."

Cites Overton Case.

Mrs. Hammond, whose committee now numbering 2,000 Louisiana women was formed during hearings of the Senate committee's hearings on the contested Overton election, cited that the Senate today "on the insistence of Mr. Long, is to hear charges made by Mr. Long against Mr. Farley, and that he called on the Senate to "face the music" and to rid public service of a "monstrous figure of plunder, of grab and take."

She insisted that the Senate now call on Huey Long to face his music. She reminded the Senators that the Senate now has a committee report finding that Long "designed and executed the vicious fraud that resulted in the election of his colleague, Mr. Overton."

The women's committee is ready to prove these charges, she said.

The letter ended with a demand to know if there is not "one Senator of the 96 who has sufficient courage to demand a showdown on the Senate committee's report against Mr. Long and a fair hearing for the women's committee of Louisiana," and the question:

"Senators—are you, too, afraid of Huey Long?"

Claims Women Disgusted.

Mrs. Hammond said she had delivered to the Vice President several thousand petitions asking that the charges be heard; that there are many others from women's organizations representing many thousands of women, and displayed folders of petitions signed by both Democratic and Republican national committeewomen and prominent feminine leaders.

"The Connally committee turned in a report which accomplished the feat of condemning corruption in the Overton election and, in effect, 'whitewashing' the corrupters," she said.

"Those hearings killed one Senator with courage. Senator Howell died from the strain of opposition, insults and threats he encountered in New Orleans. And he died begging for a full airing of the charges.

"But this demagogue has made the Senate perform in a manner which compels us to believe it is scared; that Huey Long's blusterings have made the United States Senators afraid to oppose him.

"The women of this country, at least, are disgusted. These petitions prove it. And no matter how long it takes, we are going to make the terrified Senators more afraid of concealing than bringing them into the open.

"We have plenty of evidence, gathered by the Senate committee's own former investigator and former counsel, Gen. Ansell, to prove the charges. And if necessary, we'll bring forward a document which will either oust Huey Long or put me in jail."

Pastor Advocates Legal Gambling

Such Laws Held Preventive of Dime-Letter Crazes.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 12.—Legalizing gambling was suggested in a sermon today by the Rev. L. M. Birkhead, pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church, as a preventive against such crazes as the "send-a-dime" chain letter fad which has swept the Nation.

"Man is a gambling animal," Mr. Birkhead said. "Life is a gamble, a game of chance. The chain letter craze is convincing evidence of this. With government control and supervision the evils now associated with gambling would tend to disappear and gambling would decline as a form of amusement. Now gambling is exploited by racketeers and selfish private interests."

Mr. Birkhead characterized the chain letter craze as "collective unreason, public frenzy, crowd psychosis and mob madness."

In advocating legalized gambling he asserted Columbia University was built from the sales of lottery tickets, Harvard has financed itself in the past through lotteries and churches have been built and supported by lottery devices.

The bill calling for a two-year extension, the statement said, "has all the earmarks of a tricky attempt to avoid a definite determination of the constitutional validity of the recovery act through a decision by the Supreme Court." It pointed out that a shifting of the legal foundation of NRA might allow its continuance in face of an adverse decision.

The league characterized Donald R. Richberg's attack on the recent Brookings Institution report as "another striking evidence of the Administration's un-American policy of attempting to stifle all criticism."

Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committtee, said he believed the President wanted nothing less than a two-year extension and that he believed his committee approved the President's stand.

The first business before the Senate today will be consideration of Senator Long's resolution asking for an investigation of the official conduct of oPstmaster General Farley. The Postoffice Committee already has reported that such an investigation would not be warranted.

Long has charged Farley with a number of offenses, including that of giving Government contracts for concerns in which he is interested. Farley has denied all of the charges.

Long declined to say yesterday whether he would make any additional charges or how long he would talk.

Meanwhile, it was planned to bring the Administration holding company bill, somewhat rewritten, out on the Senate floor today. It still will contain the section to abolish utility holding companies by 1942. This is the section around which opponents of the measure will stage their fight. Republicans are seeking to have this legislation dropped during the present session. Failing that, they are expected to put up a stiff fight for its defeat.

The Senate also will have before it the Norris bill, increasing the amount of money authorized for TVA expenditures and revising the act to meet the reversal suffered through the Alabama decision holding that the Government could not go into the business of selling power.

Also awaiting action in the Senate is the Wagner labor disputes bill. The House already has enacted two other Administration measures, the social security bill and the banking bill. Both are awaiting committee action in the Senate.

U. S. Outspends Other Powers In Veteran Care

Seven Times as MuchSpent as England, Survey on Bonus Shows.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

America spends seven times as much on its World War veterans as England does and 15 times as much as Italy does.

Only a veto of the Patman bill by President Roosevelt can prevent Congress from voting immediate payment of the cash bonus to World War veterans which would add $2,200,000,000 to the sums already paid out.

At the Veterans' Bureau it was learned last night that the net amount of money paid to the 4,757,240 men mobilized by the United States for the World War was $6,074,531,060. That means that from 1918 to the present this country has expended about $1,040,000 a day to care for the men who came to the colors in 1917.

This includes the costs of hospitalization and care for the disabled—an issue not involved in the Patman bill, which is a mandate to pay immediately the bonus that is not due under law until 1945.

The Veterans' Bureau has no official figures on the amounts of money expended by other governments for its former soldiers, but from other sources statistics were obtained that give a cross-section of comparative costs. Selecting a year at random—say 1932—and striking the average for each man mobilized for the World War, the picture looks like this:

	Expenses for one year	Average per man mobilized.
United States	$960,635,000	$180
Germany	298,000,000	22
France	286,722,000	34
Great Britain	174,802,000	26
Italy	60,853,000	12
Canada	61,123,000	98

Germany, which mobilized 13,000,000 men, has a low average because of heavy casualties. There were 6,111,000 Germans killed or wounded in the World War, which imposed a heavy pension burden on the Government.

Two items in the balance sheet of the veterans administration take more than half of the yearly expenditure. They are payments to the disabled veterans of the World War for maintenance and the payment of insurance policies.

In 1934 the disability payments totaled $139,445,822 and the insurance, $103,268,273.

Rep. Hope Defends Revisions of AAA

Scores Processors' Fight on Amendments.

Representative Clifford Hope, Kansas Republican, came to the defense of the pending AAA amendments in a radio speech last night, stating that the farm program is economic rather than political.

"The opposition to the licensing feature of this legislation," he said, "is being led by distributors and processors of farm products. They have the effrontery to assume to speak for the farmers of this country and object to this type of legislation because they say it will regiment the farmer and fix the prices at which he must sell his product.

"They possibly know what they are talking about, because, as a matter of fact, this group has been regimenting the farmer and fixing his prices for these many years. They seem reluctant to give up that privilege and to permit the farmer to have something to say about it himself."

Official War Pictures' Dedication Is Tonight

Two official Signal Corps pictures showing Washington men in action in the World War will be dedicated at a meeting of Washington Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars tonight by Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, jr., chief of Field Artillery.

Morgan Court Defers Action on Health Unit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 12.—Morgan County Court deferred action upon a recommendation by the Kiwanis Club for support of a Tri-County Health Unit (Morgan, Jefferson and Berkeley counties) which Berkeley County Court has approved and Jefferson Court has not acted upon. The unit was projected to take the place of existing health services in the three counties.

Court members indicated a feeling that the arragement would increase costs. Favorable action is not expected.

Phases in Life of Polish 'Father of Country' extraordinary political importance will be made overnight."

By a curious coincidence, Pilsudski died on the ninth anniversary of the 1926 uprising which put him in power.

Of Noble Lineage.

Josef Pilsudski was born December 5, 1867, at Zilow, in the province of Vilna, son of Josef Pilsudski and Marie Billewicz, descendants of ancient Polish nobility.

In 1874, fire destroyed the estate and the family moved to Vilna, where Josef, called Ziuk by his parents, attended schools, being graduated in 1885. He studied medicine at the University of Kharkoff, in Russia—Poland then was part of Russia—and joined a secret patriotic society for Polish freedom.

He was exiled in 1887 by the Czarist government to eastern Siberia. He returned five years later and moved to Warsaw where he became one of the founders of the original Polish Socialist Party. Its chief aim was Poland's independence.

Leads Guerilla Band.

Pilsudski married Marie Juszkiewicz, a young widow, who helped him in his secret patriotic activities for a free Poland. The Czarist police discovered his secret print shop and he was imprisoned, but escaped in 1902 and went to Crakow.

In Crakow, he organized a Polish military force of volunteers, his first major entrance into armed organizations. From 1906-07 he led a guerilla band in warfare on the Russians in Poland. In 1910, Pilsudski created the Polish sharpshooters' organization to fight Russia in the World War, which he foresaw.

On August 6, 1914, when the war was starting, Pilsudski led his Polish legionnaires from Crakow to Russian Poland as an independent Polish force, temporarily co-operating with Austrian forces against the Russians. His detachment was the nucleus of the present Polish army.

In June 1917, all Polish units acknowledged Pilsudski as their leader. They were scattered in Russian, German and Austrian armies.

Pilsudski refused to swear allegiance to the central powers, which feared his increasing military strength and wanted to keep him under their control.

He was arrested in Warsaw by the Germans in 1917, and transferred to a fort at Madgeburg, Germany. He was released on November 10, 1918, on the eve of the armistice, by the German revolution, and went to Warsaw, the new Polish capital.

First Marshal.

The temporary government handed full power to Pilsudski and he became "chief of state and commander in chief of the army." He was named by the entire army as first marshal of Poland on November 14, 1920.

He resigned in 1922 and retired for a time to private life. His first wife died, and he married Alexandra Szcerbinska, by whom he had two daughters, Wanda and Jadwiga. He devoted his time to memoirs.

On May 12, 1926, he intervened to save Poland from anarchy through parliamentary misrule and party strife. He was elected president, but refused. Since 1926, he remained inspector general of the army and minister of national defense, and controlled the government.

He served as prime minister twice, in 1926-1928, and in 1930.

He smoked about 60 cigarettes a day, drank quantities of tea. Before making an important decision, the marshal would relax for half an hour by playing solitaire. He considered 13 his lucky number. His interests included flowers and Polish poetry of the last century.

Biggest Rain Since '73 Floods Chicago Homes

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—The greatest rain in 62 years fell in Chicago early today, flooded thousands of basements and brought more than 3,500 appeals for pumping service to the fire department.

A four-hour electrical storm accompanied the rain but it was the heavy downpour which caused greatest damage. W. P. Day, Federal forecaster, said the rainfall of 2.73 inches was heaviest for one day since 1873 when a fall of 2.82 inches was recorded.

Barbara Weds A Court Today After Divorce

to wait long for Barbara after her divorce.

Despite his denial in New York that he would marry her or anyone else within the next year, it is believed here that the wedding will take place at the palatial Lake Tahoe summer home of George Thatcher, Barabara's attorney, either tomorrow or Tuesday.

Barbara, it is understood, intends to be back in Europe two weeks from today.

Haugwitz landed in New York a few days ago and said he would remain there for a fortnight. He denied he would fly to Reno. a jaunt he is essaying by easy stages across the country.

The Woolworth heiress was reported to be becoming restless as she neared the end of her 42-day Reno residential period.

Barbara will be joining one of the most select groups of divorcees, the former wives of the "marrying Mdivanis."

Her divorce from Alexis will place her on a par with his two brothers, Serge and David, also princes whose charms have captivated many; Serge has been divorced by Pola Negri, film star, and Mary McCormick, opera singer; David by Mae Murray, film star.

Alexis was divorced by Louise Astor Van Alen, New York society girl, and also an heiress, just before his marriage to Barbara in Paris on June 21, 1933.

The divorce will be simple and brief. Alexis will not contest the action, having been assured by Barbara that she will continue the premarriage settlement made upon him when he agreed to forego any claim to her $40,000,000. He will, of course, through his attorney, make a perfunctory denial of her charge of cruelty.

Her testimony will be given behind closed doors. Her resident witness, Carl Quist, will testify that Barbara has spent at least 42 days within Nevada; actually she has been present 43 days. Then he will leave the court.

To Tell Her Reasons.

Then with only two court attaches and the judge listening, her attorney, George Thatcher, will place Barbara upon the witness stand to say she intends to make Nevada her permanent residence. Despite this, her servants have been busy the past few days packing, ready to leave the State.

Then she is expected to tell how Alexis became cold and indifferent toward her; how he was more interested in his polo than he was in her; how he caused her great mental anguish and that she no longer loves him and that she cannot live with him without injuring her health.

Alexis' attorney, George Brown, will not cross-examine Barbara. His contribution to the hearing will be two words: "No questions."

The judge will grant the divorce and Barbara will step down from the witness stand—once more the world's wealthiest unmarried woman. If the trial requires more than eight minutes it will be because the judge wants to hear more of the marital troubles of the "poor little rich girl."

Barbara's first marital venture will have lasted just 39 days short of two years.

She is expected to leave shortly after the hearing for France—with or without the dashing count. She's complained to friends that Communists and the curious in this country and in England have made those two nations dangerous for the wealthy to reside in.

This wealth, Barbara has asserted, has made life miserable for her because she can't live the life of a normal 22-year-old girl as she would like to do. She is continually reminded of her wealth by the attention paid her.

World Traveler Gives Good Advice TO FAT FOLKS

John Lethaby, of Portland, Oreg., writes: "Have known Kruschen Salts for years in England, Africa, Brazil. I weighed 190, chest 40, waist 42. After 6 weeks with Kruschen am 165, chest 42, waist 36. It gives me pep and vigor and has kept me young."

Mr. Lethaby got rid of ugly fat safely with Kruschen—so have thousands of others. YOU can, too, if you'll only have a will of your own and not listen to gossipers who tell you silly untruths because they don't want you to become youthfully slender.

Kruschen can't harm you—it's a health treatment—let one jar (lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle) take 12 lbs. off you or money back. Just take a half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added).—Adv.

backfiring. But as the noise increased, we knew something was wrong. It sounded like machine gun fire and the first thing we thought of was gangsters.

"We lay in bed breathless for a few minutes, and then, afraid that stray bullets might hit us, we decided to go into the living room. Just then we heard our back window smash and thought it had been done by a bullet. As we started into the hallway, a light flashed in our faces. We could see the shadow of a man standing near the kitchen doorway.' He flashed the light on his gun.

"He didn't answer our question as to who he was and what he was doing. We went back into the bedroom, shut the door and shouted for police. Then two officers helped us out the window and we waited while the burglar was captured."

Residents of the neighborhood gathered yesterday to inspect bullet holes in homes and automobiles. Windows were shattered in houses near the alley and parked cars were peppered with shots. They told of nearly 20 policemen surrounding the Morgan apartment before the intruder was captured.

Suspect Has Record.

At the Tenth Precinct Station, the prisoner gave his name as Abe Stein, 30, of 1306 Q street northwest. Finger print records, however, identified him as Kelly (Western) Holmes, a known police character, it was reported. The Q street address was found to be fictitious.

A few hours before the gun battle, a burglar was reported to have entered the homes of Abraham M. Ehrlick, 1308 Randolph street northwest, and Max Brody, 1517 Upshur street northwest. The places were ransacked, but police were told nothing was taken.

Processing Tax Praised.

Luray, Va., May 12.—"The processing tax has raised the price of a cotton shirt only 5 cents and a pair of cotton overalls only 8 cents, yet it has been the effective means of giving the farmer satisfactory prices on commodities," G. F. Holsinger, of McGaheysville, president of the Virginia Farm Bureau, told members of the State Farmers Mutual Automobile and Accident Insurance Co., meeting here Saturday.

'Unknown' Honored on Mother's Day

City and Nation Mark Mother's Day

For all its reputation for being hard-boiled, New York City appeared to take its Mother's Day observance more seriously than did the hinterland. Twenty thousand persons gathered in Central Park for the occasion and listened to messages from President Roosevelt, Al Smith and other notables. Meantime the Seventy-first Regiment of the National Guard marched to St. Thomas Episcopal Church to attend the annual Mother's Day services.

In Newburgh, N. Y., Mrs. Raymond Linsig, mother of an infant son born without an esophagus, declared that she was the happiest mother in the world. The boy, born several months ago, is being fed through a tube inserted in his stomach and the doctors plan to insert an artificial esophagus in his throat after he grows older.

In Chicago, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who lost two sons in the World War, sang over the radio with a heavy heart. Just before she stepped to the microphone, she was told that her great-grandson, Hans Hirzy, 14 months old, had died of an infection resulting from an attack of measles.

Prospective mothers in Illinois received welcome news from Dr. Frank J. Jerka, State director of Public Health, who announced that motherhood today is twice as safe as it was prior to 1920.

In the 15-year period, he said, the mortality rate has dropped from 8.2 to 4.7 for each 1,000 births.

Before a throng scattered through the amphitheater at Arlington National Cemetery the American War Mothers yesterday held their eleventh annual Mothers' Day ceremonies and laid wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

H. H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, spoke briefly, stressing the significance of the day, and Mrs. Julia Cantacuzene-Grant also spoke.

A concert by the United States Navy band preceded the ceremonies. Dr. Sterling Bockhoven, of Mount Alto Hospital, and Dorothy Reddish sang. Capt. S. K. Evans, U. S. N., chief of naval chaplains, and Alva J. Brasted, chief of Army chaplains, also took part in the ceremonies.

Led by Mrs. William E. Ochiltree, national president of American War Mothers, representatives of various patriotic societies and gold star mothers, filed past a guard of honor of troops of the Sixteenth Brigade, to the Unknown Soldier's tomb.

Assisting were Commander J. O. Roberts, American Legion, and Commander Nathan Golden, V. F. W., James Pistorio, Charles E. Fritch, and Dr. Ivy Pelzman. Massing of the colors was under command of Commander A. A. Piccione, and taps was sounded by Staff Sergeant F. Witchey, of the United States Army.

Nations Roused By Fear Tokyo Will Rule Siam

Britain Especially Alarmed May Face Revision of Empire Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Bangkok, Siam, May 12.—Japanese influence has spread in Siam at a rate so alarming to Western powers, it was learned today, that diplomatic representatives have made many inquiries at government offices.

The government denied officially that Siam was being swung intentionally into Tokyo's orbit, but there appeared little doubt in the mind of the average Siamese that Japan now was Siam's "most favored nation."

Sir Josiah Crosby, British Minister, has had several long conversations with Siamese officials and each time he has been assured no step toward closer political ties with Japan has been made or is contemplated.

Crosby was told Siam and Japan are close friends only geographically. Officials intimated Siam is just as eager as foreigners to keep this country independent.

But an intimate relationship between Siam and Japan is becoming more and more an established fact. Economically, commercially and culturally the ties are being extended.

Siam's imports of Japanese goods have more than doubled in the last year. There are insistent reports Siam has signed some sort of special treaty with Japan.

Foreign quarters, disturbed by the signs of a closer understanding between Siam and Tokyo, fear this nation may become a Japanese outpost.

Siam is so situated the British Empire requires it be free and independent, under the benevolent influence of Western nations. Should it become dominated by Japanese, authorities said, British imperial policy would have to be revised.

100 Kiwanians In Region to Go To Convention

Capital District Leaders to Seek '36 Parley for Washington.

A hundred Capital District Kiwanians, headed by Harold N. Marsh, of Towson, Md., governor, will leave Friday for the Kiwanis International convention at San Antonio, where the organization will be invited to hold its next convention here next June.

The convention would bring 5,000 to 6,000 Kiwanians to the Capital.

The invitation will be extended by Harold N. Marsh, president of the Washington club. Other Washingtonians who will leave on a special train are George P. Mangan, vice president of the Washington club; Albert B. Van Voorhees, a director; Lewis T. Breuninger, past president, and Bynum E. Hinton.

Two local Kiwanians who will address the international convention are Roe Fulkerson, first president of the Washington Club, and Strickland Gillilan, whose addresses will be broadcast over a national radio network next Monday at 9 p. m.

Edwin F. Hill, of Washington, international trustee and past president of the local club, will leave Tuesday to attend meetings of the trustees preceding the convention. The convention begins Sunday. New international officers will be elected.

'Nickel Beer' Urged By House Group

By the Associated Press.

A slash in the beer tax with a "nickel-a-schooner" in mind was reported gaining favor with House Ways and Means Committee members yesterday, but vigorous Treasury opposition made action unlikely.

"We ought to put the tax down to where we can get a schooner of beer for a nickel," Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, said.

He has introduced a bill to chop the beer levy from $5 to $2 a barrel, but Undersecretary Coolidge wrote Chairman Doughton the Treasury wants the tax left alone, because such a cut would cost more than $200,000,000 in taxes.

Area Winners In Spelling Bee Meet Saturday

Survivor of Division Finals Will Compete for National Honors.

Fifty-six boys and girls, all first or second place winners in county or city matches of the national spelling bee, will meet in the auditorium of the New National Museum in Washington on Saturday to compete for the championship of Maryland and Virginia. The winner will represent this territory in the national spelling bee, sponsored locally by The Washington Post.

The first prize for the championship of the area is a set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica Junior. This 12-volume reference work was designed and edited for students, and is profusely illustrated. Second prize is a four-volume set of Champlin's Young Folks' Encyclopaedia. Both are offered by The Post, which already has given books as prizes in the county matches.

The winner of this match will take part in the national spelling bee, competing against champion spellers of other parts of the United States, for $1,750 in cash prizes.

Both the area finals and the national match will be broadcast over Station WJSV. The first of these two contests, in which all county winners take part, will begin promptly at 10:30 a. m. on Saturday. As radio time is limited, after half an hour the match will continue off the air until the spellers are reduced to about 15. They then will be guests of The Post at luncheon, and the remaining spellers will go on the air for the final part of the match from 2 to 3 o'clock.

The national spelling bee, also to be held in the New National Museum, on Tuesday morning, May 28, will be broadcast over the same station.

Berwyn Church Swepet by $12,000 Fire

A. B. Hill Photo.

at $12,000, with insurance coverage amounting to $11,000. The flames attracted a crowd of 5,000, with firemen from neighboring communities assisting the volunteer force at Berwyn for more than an hour before they were under control.

The fire was believed to have started in a lavatory in a connecting building between the gymnasium and the Sunday School room. The floor of this room is made of concrete, which first led to the belief that the fire had been deliberately started.

Prince Georges County Policemen Albert Anderson and Howard Slater, who have been investigating the fire, said last night that although it was possible that the fire had been of incendiary origin, they had found no definite reason for believing this to be the case.

Mr. Keefauver yesterday said that he was led to the belief that suspicious circumstances surrounded the starting of the fire by the fact that within the past six months four large vacant buildings in that vicinity had been destroyed by fire of unknown origin. During the past ten years, he recalled, property valued at more than $100,000 had been destroyed by fire in that section ,and in practically all cases the origin of the fires had never been discovered.

Police of the county, aided by experts from the fire marshal's office in aBltimore, will continue the investigation today.

Regular services were held on the lawn of the church yard yesterday morning, besides the still smouldering ruins. Plans for observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the church, which had been scheduled for next Sunday, will be carried out, the members decided at the services yesterday, and in case of inclement weather tents will be erected to cover the congregation.

Woman's Club Art Exhibition Is Inaugurated

Water Colors Feature of Bethesda Showing; Lasts Three Days.

The Woman's Club of Bethesda yesterday opened its three-day exhibition of fine and applied arts at the clubhouse at Old Georgetown and Sonoma roads.

The exhibit was composed almost entirely of water colors with a few prints and etchings. There were very few drawings shown. Miss Clara Saunders, Washington artist, who was in charge of hanging the pictures, expressed pleasure at the variety of the works shown. Although she had originally feared that an exhibition composed of so many water colors might be weak, she said, she found the current display in Bethesda one of the strongest ever shown in the vicinity.

A feature of the showing was a drawing-room group made up of the works of craftsmen such as Thomas W. Pyle, who made the furniture; Mrs. Fred Keplinger, who made a rug; Vaughn Darby, who created a table cover; Kathleen Wheeler, who made the tile mantelpiece, and Miss Saunders, who did some block-print work. Also on the stage was a still life by Mrs. Mary D. Dawson, featuring a large green bottle. On the wall was a hanging, "Sugar Plum Tree," by Marybland Bryant.

Mrs. Frances H. Combs' profile of a colored girl, "Eliza," attracted considerable attention, as did John Butler's group of six Greek scenes. Lona Miller Keplinger showed a painting of ships at Gloucester, and Jamieson Mitchell, winner of an award in the Washington Independent Art Exhibit, entered "Near Chain Bridge," "Over the Hills" and "Tower of St. John's Church" in his second art exhibit. Mrs. Marcella Comis Winslow showed a painting of Anticoli Corrado. Charles Bittenger's etchings, Rowland Lyon's three prints, Phoebe Hyatt's "Flamingoes" and Mrs. Mathilde Leisenring's two head portraits were also centers of attraction.

Other Exhibitors.

Other exhibitors included Susan B. Chase, Margaret L. Comeygs, Eleanor Parke Custis, L. M. Leisenring, Mary P. Godding, Margaretta Lent Mulford, Margaret Casey Gates, Robert Franklyn Gates, Esther McCord Chapman, Elizabeth Evens Graves, Emily M. Stewart, Alice S. Poetry, Hope Ridings Miller tells us, is not what poets create; it's what creates poets. And we think Hope Ridings Miller should know, because (1) she's a poet herself, and (2) she selects the column of modern verse which appears on the woman's pages of The Post each Monday morning.

This column of verse, which was started months ago (we suspect it was to provide a safety valve for the poets that bloomed in the Spring, tra la), has become one of the best features of its kind in the United States, and has won National recognition. For one thing, it's different: the verses scan and the poems make sense. Hope, you see, doesn't care much for odes to the Washington Monument, or sonnets to some other woman's left eyebrow. The common, or terrible, variety of poet who gushes forty stanzas over the first robin must gush somewhere else. It takes more than a rhyming dictionary and a hackneyed theme to make her column.

During the week, Hope reads through seventy-five magazines devoted to poetry, carefully selecting only the very best verse, which is reprinted on Monday morning. Too, she believes that Washington has some pretty good poets despite Congress, and she publishes much of their work. Strange as it seems, some of these poems are so good that even the linotypers who set them into type have been seen gazing abstractly into space, muttering about the gardens between dawn and sunrise. It's so good we read it ourselves.

Writing about her column of poetry has about convinced us that one thing wrong with this country is that we don't read enough poetry The average man thinks about it once during a few Spring-times in his youth, and if he mentioned a poem to his wife, she'd probably faint . . . but she'd like it. And the man who isn't married yet . . . well, if he'd try reading a little poetry before he called on his Best Girl, he'd discover a lot of new ways to tell her how much he loved her, and she'd listen more carefully. You know, you can get quite drunk on poetry, and when you do, it's much more intoxicating than wine . . . and the hangover isn't so bad.

If you haven't been reading any poetry lately, or if you think that poetry died with Swinburne and Tennyson, we sincerely advise you to look at the woman's pages this morning and read Hope Ridings Miller's column. You'll be surprised to discover how vital and truthful modern poetry can be . . . and we're sure that your entire week will be brighter because of it. Let Hope Ridings Miller bring the contemporary poets to you each Monday morning in

Funeral Today For H.H. Roden At Waynesboro

Oldest Native-Born Resident, 70, Had Been Ill Several Months.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., May 12.—Funeral services for Harry H. Roden, 70, Waynesboro's oldest native-born resident, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow. He had been ill for several months. The Rev. C. E. Brandt will conduct the services at the home, assisted by the Rev. R. W. Cousar. Lee Lodge of Masons will officiate at the interment in Riverview Cemetery. Mr. Roden died at 7 a. m. Saturday.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Mary C. Roden; one son, Harry Roden, jr., Staunton; two daughters, Mrs. J. F. McCaffrey, Charlottesville, and Mrs. Bruce Phillips, Waynesboro, and a sister, Mrs. Albert Bush, Waynesboro.

Roden was the son of Maj. and Mrs. James B. Roden, his father being with Gen. Lee at Appomattox, and was the oldest living alumnus of Fishburne Military School, being a student under Col. James A. Fishburne in the first year of the school.

Mr. Roden was long a railroad employe. He retired in 1934 on account of ill health after 37 years of service.

For 20 years Roden was secretary of the local Masonic lodge and was widely known in Virginia fraternal circles. He was a member of the Royal Arch Chapter here, Stevenson Commandery, Knights Templar, of Staunton, and Acca Temple, Shriners, of Richmond, postmasters of the Lee Lodge of Masons will act as pallbearers.

Albert A. Onthank.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 12.—Funeral services for Albert A. Onthank, 68, who died Friday here, were held yesterday at St. Johns Episcopal Church, of which he was a communicant. The body was taken to Littleton, N. C., for burial.

Onthank was a native of Boston and was in business for several years. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. W. T. Macleod and three sisters, Mrs. Ada Greenwood, Mrs. Elizabeth Crofut and Miss Emmie Onthank, of Beufort, N. C.

Charles W. Beachley.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., May 12.—Funeral services will be conducted here tomorrow afternoon for Charles William Beachley, 71, well-known farmer of near Broad Run, who died yesterday morning from paralysis. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, Burkittsville, and the Jr. O. U. A. M., Jefferson.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Sara S. Beachley, three sons and two daughters survive: Edgar H. Beachley, Corapolis, Pa.; William A. Beachley, Charles D. Beachley, Mrs. Foster S. Funk and Mrs. Victor Gibbons, all of near Broad Run. One sister, Mrs. William Young, Petersville, and two brothers, Elmer Beachley and D. Carlton Beachley, Broad Run, also survive. Burial will be in the Lutheran Cemetery here.

E. T. Moorefield.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., May 12.—Funeral services were held tonight at Bachelors Hall for E. T. Moorefield, 71, for many years a member of the Pittsylvania County board of supervisors and magistrate, who died in a local hospital from diphtheria Friday night. His widow and 11 children survive.

Blast Decapitates Employe of Dairy

Purcellville, Va., May 12 (AP).—Richard Thompson, 25, employe of the Black Oak Dairy Farm near here, was instantly killed today when struck by a piece of a 5,000-gallon capacity water tank which exploded. The force of the impact decapitated Thompson.

The explosion loosened the coil of a refrigeration plant in the building, releasing gases in the room, and it was some time before fellow employes, holding wet towels over their faces, were able to recover the body. The accident was attributed to excessive pressure in the tank. The farm is owned by M. N. Lyon.

Boley Fund Established To Aid Girl Students

Snow Hill, Md., May 12 (AP).—College girls from the Eastern Shore, attending various institutions in and out of the State, may obtain financial aid from a fund set up by the Eastern Shore District of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs.

The fund, to be known as the Clara Benson Boley Memorial Student Loan Fund, has been established in recognition of the service to the federation of the late Mrs. Alfonso Boley, of Royal Oak, who was active in educational work on the Eastern Shore.

Fire Fair to Open June 21.

Salisbury, May 12 (AP).—The Salisbury Fire Company, No. 2, has set June 21 to 29 for the annual firemen's fair, sponsored by the company. Funds derived from the fair will be used for completion of payments on the organization's building indebtedness.

Rep. Randolph, Mrs. Miller Talk At Alexandria

Woman's Democratic Club to Observe Third Anniversary.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, and Mrs. Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, national chairman of the State of Pennsylvania, will be the guest speaker at the third birthday anniversary of the Woman's Democratic Club of Arlington County, Thursday evening at the George Mason Hotel at Alexandria.

The banquet will be served at 7 o'clock and will be followed by a program of entertainment and dancing from 10 to 1 o'clock.

Having for the past several years opposed the sale of fireworks within the limits of Arlington County, a special committee from the executive committee of the Organized Women Voters will appear before the board at its meeting tomorrow and urge the adoption of a county ordinance that will prohibit the sale and use of fireworks in the county.

The committee points out that in nearly all sections of the country the sale of fireworks is being prohibited and that like action by the county officials can make many accidents avoidable.

Harry K. Green, commissioner of revenue, and his assistants, will be at the Arlington firehouse tomorrow night from 7 to 9 o'clock to assist taxpeyers in the preparation of their local and State tax returns.

All persons residing in Arlington County on January 1 of this year are subject to a tax return either in person or by agent. It is likewise required, the commissioner points out, that all married persons having an income of $2,000 and single persons with an income of $1,000 shall be required to make a return. Compensation received entirely from the Federal Government is not taxable as income, and persons whose entire income is received from this source will not be required to make a State income return. They will be required to make a return on tangible and intangible personal property.

S. P. Vanderslice, principal of the Washington-Lee High School, will speak on "Social Life of the Young People" at the annual meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston tomorrow night. The meeting will be held in the school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

The nominating committee composed of Mrs. William Loveless, Mrs. Norman German and Mrs. Morris Abel will submit a slate of officers for election.

The Carne Precinct Citizens Association will meet tomorrow night at St. Mary's Episcopal Church on Glebe road. Among the speakers will be Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Emery N. Hosmer and John Paul Jones, candidates for the office of Commonwealth's attorney, subject to the Democratic primary August 6.

As a convenience to those residing within the precinct who have not yet registered, the registrar will attend the meeting and register those otherwise qualified to vote in the November election for county officers.

A. B. Bensinger Dies; Kentucky Attorney

Louisville, Ky., May 12 (AP).—Arthur B. Bensinger, 55, Louisville attorney who figured prominently in important litigation in State and Federal courts, died suddenly of heart attack at his home here today.

Bensinger successfully defended Kentucky race track interests when at attempt was made by the State attorney general's department to revoke their charters five years ago. He was of defense counsel in the $14,000,000 suit of the receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky against the directors. As counsel for James B. Brown, former president of the defunct bank, he obtained a directed verdict of acquittal when Brown was tried on a charge of misapplication of funds.

Talbott Bank Director.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., May 12.—Frank Talbott has been elected a member of the board of directors of the American National Bank & Trust Co. which his late father played a part in founding. He succeeds James M. Lea, resigned.

Addition Is Planned To Public Building

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 12.—An addition to the Clerks Office Building on Court square, the cost of which is to be borne jointly by the city and county, will be recommended to the city council at its next regular session.

The county and city committees reached accord yesterday on the proposed addition which is expected to cost approximately $20,000. Under the suggested plan the city will assume half the cost of the building, which will be placed on the county's property. The city now has an agreement under which it pays 60 per cent of the operating expenses and one-half construction costs for the use of the building jointly with the county.

Seaboard Zion Area Adopts $25,000 Quota

Newport News, Va., May 12 (AP).—Zionists at the thirteenth annual convention of the Bar Mitzvah in the Seaboard region this afternoon by resolution assumed the quota of $25,305, bringing to $50,000 the total subscribed by the region and three other States, Delaware, Georgia and Florida.

Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, delievered the principal address of the morning session which convened with 300 delegates in attendance. His report as president set forth the accomplishments of the year as the most outstanding since the movement was inaugurated in this country.

Town to Vote on Bonds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., May 12.—The town of Stanley, this county, will decide June 4 whether $18,000 in bonds will be issued for a waterworks system. If the bonds carry the sum will be borrowed from the Federal Government.

No Soulless Corporation

IT IS a distinguishing paradox of the milk business that although no human hands come in contact with its product, "labor" is the largest single item of expense excepting only milk itself.

It is a noteworthy fact that this business, ultra modern in its use of mechanisms and scientific apparatus for the handling and processing of the raw material, provides work for thousands of men and women.

The men who unload at the country and city plants, the drivers of the trucks, the chemists who test the product, the men who operate the pasteurizing machines, bottling machines, washing and sterilizing machines, the delivery salesmen, the office and supervisory staffs . . . all are necessary to make the milk business sanitary, serviceable, and economical.

This lively accent on the human equation invites revision of any belief that the corporate milkman can be soulless.

As a matter of fact, the men and women represented in the composite individualism of this company are good Americans, good citizens, good neighbors—the sort of folks who count—and who are always counted—in any inventory of community resources.

By the Associated Press.

Mathews Courthouse, Va., May 12. A man who despaired of the future 70 years ago today gave thanks he has "been spared these many years."

He is Maj. Giles Buckner Cooke, the last surviving member of the staff of Gen. Robert E. Lee, who will be 97 tomorrow.

Seventy years and one month ago yesterday, April 11, 1865, two days after surrender, Maj. Cooke, at Appomattox, closed his war diary with this quotation:

"I am a citizen slave, and what will become of me and the people of our Southland, God only knows."

Today, in his easy chair, Maj. Cooke, a retired Episcopal minister, received his friends, with the comment:

"I am very thankful that I have been spared these many years, and am now in such good health."

Maj. Cooke has been stripped of his agility by age, but his spirit is unbroken, and his love and admiration of "that noble Christian gentleman," Robert Edward Lee, is still youthfully fervent, and dominates his conversation.

As he recalls his war experiences under five Confederate generals—finally Gen. Lee—with the aid of his diary, he tells of horrors which caused him to pray that if he were spared he would devote the remainder of his life to religious work.

This he did, until he retired several years ago, to live with his family—his wife, daughter and youngest son being constantly with him, in their rambling old ante-bellum home here.

Candidate Declares For Election in 1938

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., May 12.—Despite the fact that scarcely six months have elapsed since Frederick County elected officials for four-year terms, and the next primaries and election will not be held until 1938, one Democratic aspirant to succeed Roy M. (Pat) Hiltner as sheriff is already in the field.

Charles Edgar Bruchey, of Frederick, who says he believes the old adage that "the early bird catches the worm," formally announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for sheriff today.

The Sweat Of Politics.

An organization to "promote Socialism in the United States" has been formed by a group of American Rhodes scholars studying at Oxford University. Headed, among others, by Paul Engle, a young poet who has recently published some of his work in this country, it is reported that 38 of the 84 students plan to enter left-wing politics on their return home.

Inasmuch as the news was relayed by a British correspondent, the implications of the plan are not as sinister as they might appear to some. The word Socialism is much more popularly accepted in England than in this country. A visiting lecturer recently commented on this point, expressing no little amezement at the general throwing up of hands that greeted any mention of Socialism. Yet, he observed, some part of the American public listens complacently enough to Senator Long, Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin and studies with interest the program of the Tennessee Valley experiment. But the label Socialism is anathema.

Even if leftism had been substituted for Socialism in the dispatch, however, the news must meet with some skepticism. On every side the cry goes up for trained men in government and politics. To a certain extent, the criers fail to appreciate the extensive training behind a goodly proportion of the men now active in public affairs. No doubt the Rhodes scholars have received valuable training for public service. But whether they will be able to make it effective is a question.

Any number of young men come out of college every year brimful of zeal and sound theory. Only too sadly, they soon lose their enthusiasm. The common excuse is that politics is too dirty a game. It is a weak excuse. The fact of the matter is that these students are not willing to submit to the irritating but inescapable delays and discouragements that fall to the lot of any man who would inject new techniques and new philosophies into a long established system.

Theodore Roosevelt as a young man in New York found that politics was the business of men unlike the polished company to which he had been accustomed. But he was willing to plunge into the unfamiliar atmosphere of dirty fingernails and celluloid collars. He was willing to take for granted the system of rewards and punishments and to serve his term heeling for the bosses. In the end, having demonstrated his worth, he was able to put his own enlightened ideas into practice. Not many of his contemporaries were thus willing to grapple with the actualities of politics; nor are their counterparts today.

It is good news that these Rhodes scholars have positive convictions. If they can put into practice their training in political science, more power to them. If they fail, it will not be existing corruption that will foil them, but their own inability to make the transition from theory to practical politics.

Drastic Measures In Order.

Authorities in three large Eastern cities have simultaneously announced plans to crack-down on reckless motorists. In New York, Mayor LaGuardia ordered "drastic action" against intoxicated drivers. Maryland's new Commissioner of Motor Vehicles served notice that negligent driving—particularly failure to stop on entering boulevards and "cutting out and in when passing other vehicles"—has "got to stop." Judges in the Washington Police Court have decided to impose larger fines upon motorists who jeopardize public safety.

In each case these authorities have been actuated by appalling lists of traffic fatalities. The District has found that safety campaigns designed to reduce accidents through public cooperation produce only meager results. They do not affect the type of driver who flagrantly disregards the law. So far as these callous individuals are concerned stiffer penalties seem to be the only means of protecting the public. The surprising thing is that these more drastic efforts to avert needless tragedies have been so long delayed.

Precautions in applying the new policy will be necessary, however, if it is to promote justice as well as safety. The penalties should be uniform in all the courts and the practice of making arrests should be standardized. That is particularly difficult under present conditions, because virtually all traffic on the principal streets moves faster than the speed limit. The increase in penalties, desirable though it is, accentuates the need for re-examination of obsolete regulations. As a practical matter it is very important that movements of this sort should penalize the truly reckless driver, or even eliminate him from the streets, and not merely add to the congestion of traffic.

Both Are Inflationary.

Testifying before the Senate sub-committee on banking last week, Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board asserted that the Patman bonus bill is no more inflationary than the issuance of Government bonds to meet a deficit, and will not increase the amount of currency in circulation. Of course, this opinion has been eagerly seized upon by some advocates of the bonus as an argument in favor of the Patman measure.

However, it is not calculated to appeal to congressional inflationists, like Senator Borah or Senator Long, who believe the country needs an abundance of cheap money. Indeed, if the Patman bill had not been urged as an inflationary expedient, it probably would not have been so easy to displace the Vinson bill, which would permit the Treasury to finance bonus payments through bond issues.

No doubt, Governor Eccles is correct in assuming that the mere issuance of greenbacks would not add permanently to the volume of currency in circulation. After one or two purchases had been made, the funds would reach the banks in the form of cash deposits, resulting in the retirement either of the new greenbacks or some other kind of money. The banks in turn would deposit this superfluous cash with the Federal Reserve Banks, thereby adding to the already huge volume of excess reserves for which no immediate outlet exists.

If bonus payments were met by bond issues, the sums placed at the disposal of veterans would similarly reach the banks in the form of individual deposits and in a roundabout way constitute a basis for a huge potential credit expansion. Moreover, under present conditions a large proportion of Government issues go into the portfolios of banks in the absence of an investment demand sufficient to absorb them. In case of need, these securities can be made the basis for new issues of Federal Reserve notes through borrowing operations on the part of member banks.

Theoretically, therefore, the difference between greenback issues and bond issues as a means of financing budgetary deficits, whether incurred for the sake of paying soldiers' bonuses or for other purposes, is at present more apparent than real. Nevertheless, a country that depends upon the printing press to supply current revenue runs a much greater risk of creating that "fear psychology" to which Governor Eccles alluded. Once confidence in the public credit is undermined through resort to fiat money, a flight from the currency may result, bringing in its train a disastrously rapid rise in prices.

Already, the basis for such a catastrophe has been laid by the creation of vast reserves of unutilized credit. To add approximately $2,000,000,000 to our rapidly mounting deficit might be the spark which would ignite an inflationary blaze. The possibility of such an outcome is especially to be feared if the Patman bill should become law. But the Vinson bill would be viewed with almost as great trepidation if its nature and effects were as fully understood.

Instead of regarding Governor Eccles' testimony as buttressing the case for the Patman bill, therefore, it would be much more reasonable to interpret it as a warning against any kind of bonus legislation.

Higher Education Of Women.

Only an utter hardhead will argue against higher education for women today. Except possibly in Germany, where Kinder, Kirche und Kueche have been designated as the "natural" limits of feminine horizons, women the world over are increasingly assuming their logical places in the affairs of the day. From Chile, from Moscow, from Manila and Istanbul come constant reports of political and other extramural activity on the part of women. In very truth, woman now comes into her own. This being the case, she requires adequate training.

The education of women, however, is easier contemplated than accomplished. It used to be considered clever to declare that you can lead a girl to Vassar but you can't make her think. Aside from the vague humor of the remark, there is in some cases more than a grain of truth in it. Nevertheless, higher education of women today has in view something more than the dainty "finish" for which the young ladies' seminary of the mansard roof era was designed. To combine the rosebud-gathering proclivities of the young girl with the dry business of logarithms and past participles presents a not inconsiderable problem. The formula is still to be completely worked out.

Dr. Henry I. Stahr, the new president of Hood College in Frederick, has before him a rich opportunity to contribute toward the solution. He has assumed the direction of an institution for 41 years dedicated to the education of women. It is not an easy assignment. Hood is a small college. The "big five" of this country's women's colleges so generally overshadow the less conspicuous institutions that endowments and enrollments suffer accordingly. But as women continue to assert themselves in the world, the demand for just such educational facilities as Hood offers will grow.

With one woman already in the Cabinet and others in Congress, the Government, the courts, the markets, in the air and even on the sea, it is plain that what is so unfortunately termed "feminism" is here to stay. Hood and its many similar sister institutions will play an important part in the proper integration of women into the complex of the present-day America.

Science And Justice.

It would be absurd to believe that the jig is entirely up for the lawbreakers of the country. But if the plans of the Department of Justice materialize, it is safe to assume that the tempo of crime will be slowed down appreciably. By use of ultra-high frequency waves, it is proposed to co-ordinate the leading State and municipal enforcement agencies of the Nation into one vast system. With a central radio station atop the Federal headquarters in Washington, it would be possible instantaneously to "blanket" wide areas after robberies, kidnapings or other serious crimes. Roads could be blocked off immediately and identifications broadcast to every police agent in the vicinity. Interception of information could be prevented by the use of special radio channels, or if necessary, by resort to codes.

Here is one instance in which science and invention have not played directly into the hands of criminals. High speed automobiles and boats, elusive airplanes, easy communication, perfected guns and improved surgical techniques have all been simply and quickly turned to nefarious ends. Admittedly, some of these advantages have been available to the police as well, but the net gain has remained on the side of the criminal. Now the tables may be turned. Radio science appears to give a trump card to the law alone. No matter how highly organized an outlaw band may be, it can never hope even to equal the advantages of this Nation-wide system.

Already experimental stations have been licensed in as far-flung centers as Los Angeles, Boston, Birmingham and Chicago, with 133 cities in all ultimately to be included in the system. Together with this radio experiment is a plan to establish a National Crime Institute for the training of police officers and prosecutors and also to serve as a clearing house for police information. Science and organization throw their weight on the side of justice in this new program. The balance bids fair to swing back in favor of law and order.

Point Of Agreement.

Some one once said that two-thirds of writing is reading. Now it appears from the numerous interviews with authors that are flooding the country today that two-thirds of writing is talking. And of all the rules or reasons for success which have been handed down by those who have achieved it, none are more paradoxical than those for the aspiring writer.

First Hilaire Belloc, prolific English writer, declares that he "hates his trade." Then along comes Ellen Glasgow, "the lady who was," who loves the business of words so much that she "dreads to finish a novel." William Saroyan's success is due not so much to his natural ability for self-expression as his cultivated capacity for self-analysis. And yet the crystal-minded Katherine Mansfield was vehement in her denunciation of that quality, which she termed "this fastidious probing" of writers.

What, then, is the young writer to believe? Kathleen Norris says there must be "some brightness, some hope" in fiction. Hemingway, on the other hand, upholds a criterion of realism for all good books, declaring that they "are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened." And whereas Marcel Proust used to revise his manuscript so repeatedly in search of the mot juste that it was undecipherable, Katherine Mansfield preferred to destroy an entire story rather than change a single word.

Such a maze of contradiction is bound to be bewildering to the beginner. But what may be a small measure of consolation is Miss Glasgow's avowed belief that "authors don't find subjects but subjects find good authors." In other words, put on your best literary bib-and-tucker, announce you are "at home" to the Muse, and stand by for an Anthony Adverse or a Mr. Chips to drop in. But what the theoretical Miss Glasgow forgot to add was that the Muse, unlike the postman, does not ring twice. That, at least, is one point on which all authors must perforce agree.

An Illinois motorist who ran down a pedestrian in a congested center is suing him for reckless walking. The charge should be easy to sustain. Any pedestrian who walks in a congested center nowadays is reckless.

New NRA Measure.

From the Dallas Morning News.

NRA stalked back into the United States Senate Friday carrying a club. The measure which Senator Pat Harrison introduced in haste is admittedly brought in to stave off strikes in four major industries. The President and Mr. Richberg, checked in the effort to obtain a two-year extension of the recovery act, are joined by President William Green of the Federation of Labor in the new plea that continuation is an industrial necessity. Mr. Green has his own joker in the deal with a reiterated demand for the 30-hour week; this is not a part of the Harrison bill and has been unacceptable to the Administration.

There is no assurance that Senator Harrison's bill will meet with ready approval in Congress in spite of the somber specter of wide-scale strike. There is every reason to believe that any NRA extension bill adopted will contain material alterations. If NRA is to go on, whether as a permanent national policy or a gradual demobilization measure, it should not be on a basis of compromise with force. For, if that is to be the case, there is no hope of industrial peace.

After two years, the President must see, as the rest of the country clearly perceives, that the idealistic theory on which NRA was founded will not work. When it gets away from the ideal, by way of paradox, NRA itself becomes impractical. The Harrison measure recognizes that in the loose application of code membership it would provide.

The Price Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Not Yet Hopeless," in The Post of May 6 attributes to me an attitude of resignation on the question of America and the next war which does not reflect my actual views. I certainly did not intend to convey any such impression in my talk before the Teachers Union of Washington.

What I said was that the only sure way to keep out of another world war is to prevent that war from breaking out. America, having declined to cooperate with other powers in building an international system to preserve peace, can do little at the moment to prevent war. This does not mean, however, that the United States should abandon its efforts to avoid war, even though the obstacles appear to be very great.

On the contrary, as I pointed out to the Teachers Union, it is urgent that the United States should recognize the need for a new policy of neutrality and give immediate consideration to the various neutrality measures before Congress. An embargo on munitions and loans to belligerents might possibly have kept us out of the last war. Drastic restriction on trade and contraband may keep us from becoming involved in another war. But these self-imposed limitations demand a sacrifice, and the American people must be made to realize that they can not have peace without paying the price.

I agree entirely with The Post that the possibility of failure in a matter of such great importance certainly should not discourage any reasonable effort to guard against war. WILLIAM T. STONE.

"The Letter Killeth."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The cartoon in The Post of May 4 depicting Uncle Sam lynched at the hands of the Senate suggests a far more serious picture than perhaps the cartoonist intended to portray It far transcends, in sinister significance, the doing to death of the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill at the hands of a group of provincial Senators. It exhibits in gruesome form the helplessness of America at the hands of the mob. This cartoon is but a gruesome embodiment of the well-known fact, in comtemplation of which every patriotic American hangs his head in shame. Race and section are obliterated from the picture. The spirit of lawlessness stands out in its defiant preeminence.

After all, what America needs is not so much an antilynching bill but an antilynching spirit, without which legislative enactments will be nugatory and dead. The letter killeth, the spirit maketh alive. We have seen the fourteenth, fifteenth and eighteenth amendments lynched with impunity by American people.

The Federal Diary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a constant reader of "The Federal Diary" and want to express my opinion that its contents are interesting and very well written.

It occurs to me that still further publicity would not only promote the interests of Government employes, but would also constitute important news to those of your readers who are Federal workers.

As you know, we are numerous.

On Sharing Wealth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the rich to tamely surrender their wealth over for redistribution to the poor, per capita or otherwise, would indeed be a remarkable thing; something that I doubt will ever materialize.

But for the rich to do business with their money and give employment to the poor, together with a living wage, to do deeds of charity and philanthropy for worthy causes, such as education and religion, would share the wealth of the rich in a great measure.

If the rich should dole out their wealth to the poor in less than a year they would have it all back again. Then why dream of such a delusive phantom or economic Utopia? God is the author of riches and he gives men power to get wealth. It seems as though it was divinely intended for some to be rich and some to be poor. If all were rich there would be none to work; if all were poor there would be none to help the other.

The share-the-wealth propaganda might be a good hobby for some candidate to ride into office, but the poor will still be on the outside waiting for the rich to share his wealth with him.

Punishment For Reckless Drivers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed with some interest the publication of the last letter I wrote you on the subject of motor accidents, and I have heard your Mr. Hull with especial interest detail over the radio what all of you are doing to lessen the accidents in the streets of Washington.

I take the liberty of writing you again because neither the committees in control of this most important feature of our municipal life, nor the Commissioners, nor even your Mr. Hull, seem to grasp what, to me, appears the most important feature in all of this unfortunate business, and it is the quick punishment of the man or woman driving the motor causing the accident.

Your Mr. Hull details at considerable length most interesting advice to these reckless drivers as to how to turn a corner. Since hearing him I have stood on the street and watched how many follow his suggestions, and I wish to advise you that they constitute, in my opinion, not more than 60 per cent. What is the use of penalizing, with a money penalty, the owner of a car, or forcing a driver to take out insurance and then penalizing an insurance company when you know the individual is directly and personally responsible for the flagrant and criminal negligence causing the wrong?

A friend of mine now in this office has two ribs broken, caused a few days ago by a large Packard car, driven by a woman, turning a corner in the middle of the road. The money compensation to this gentleman which will, beyond doubt, be paid by an insurance company, is not any punishment for this woman. She was driving a car entirely without thought of the protection or safeguarding of the lives or property of others. This incident is an example of what is going on in the streets of Washington every day and every night, and the authorities are absolutely unwilling to take up the punishment of the actual driver of the car. Will you give some prominence to this criticism?

I can not close this letter without congratulating you and The Post on the useful efforts which you are making to safeguard the citizens of Washington who are constantly threatened, not only by many who reside in the city and recklessly break the laws, but also by those who come from all parts of the Union and stay for a short time and apparently neither care for the people who reside in our city nor are willing to abide by the traffic rules and regulations. I walked down Fifteenth street a few days ago and personally examined the license tags on the cars parked along the street, and found license tags from nearly every State in the Union. The drivers of these cars are insured, and unless quickly and personally punished after an accident, shrug their shoulders, express some sympathy in words which are meaningless, and go on and forget the occurrence.

Will you try and drive home to the minds of the people of Washington the importance of rapidly punishing personally the criminal driver of a car who wrongfully breaks the traffic rules and regulations and injures another in the streets of Washington?

The Post Impressionist

Hard Hatting G. B. Shaw.

Post Office, Monday.

BE CAREFUL! If you go to the Capitol and climb the dome, and climb the statue of Armed Liberty on top of the dome, and top the statue with a top hat, photograph the result and then print, publish or otherwise circulate the photographs—why, you'll be liable to an action at law for violation of the property rights of the United States Government or the surviving heirs of Sculptor Thomas Crawford.

At least you will if the American courts follow a precedent recently indicated by the courts of Great Britain.

For a venerable British tribunal has granted an injunction forbidding people to put a hard hat on "George Bernard Shaw" — Jacob Epstein's bust of George Bernard Shaw—in photographs.

It was the solemn Court of Chancery that made the ruling—how Dickens would have loved to record it!—and it is the solemn law reporter of the solemn London Times that solemnly reports the proceedings for us:

"Before Mr. Justice Farwell, Mr. Jacob Epstein applied for an injunction to restrain the defendants, Keystone View Co., Inc., from infringing Mr. Epstein's copyright in a bronze bust of Mr. Shaw, the work of Mr. Epstein, by printing, publishing or otherwise circulating a photograph taken by the defendants at the Leicester Galleries, Green street (London), in March, 1935, depicting the bust with a bowler hat on."

(No, Sadie Blake, a bowler hat is not a cricket pitcher's cap. We have Dr. Noah Webster's word for it that it is the English version of what we Americans dub a derby. Presumably, it derives its British name from its shape.)

"Counsel said that when an exhibition of Mr. Epstein's latest works was opened at the Leicester Galleries * * * the press were invited to attend and take photographs of the works. A photograph of the bronze bust of Mr. G. B. Shaw was taken by the defendants; but, instead of its being taken in the state in which the bust was executed, a bowler hat was placed on the head of the bust, which was then photographed, and that photograph was disseminated to the press. If the taking of that photograph was inspired by any sense of humor, it could only be said it was in the worst possible taste."

The sculptor had indubitably been seriously injured. His learned counsel said so, nor did learned counsel for the defense deny it.

Nevertheless, there was no intention to seek serious injury to the defendant in return. There was no demand for radical retribution. This was a case without any appeal to the ancient lex talionis; in the main; only preventive justice was sought—a decision that would restrain possible future offenders from otherwise possibly similar crimes.

"Plaintiff had obtained full apologies from all the newspapers he had been able to trace who had inserted the photograph in their journals. And as he had been given a full apology by the defendants, who stated that during the time that the photograph was taken and sent out their general manager was abroad, plaintiff, in those circumstances, was prepared to treat the motion as trial of the action on the undertakings being given."

This, interpreted, means:

That the sculptor was willing to agree not to press for punitive damages if—

(a) The defendants, having already made verbal amends, would promise to destroy the negative of the offending photograph:

(b) And to employ their best efforts toward the recovery and destruction of all prints thereof still extant;

(c) And if they would not oppose the application for an injunction—thereby making its granting certain, and so conceding a formal moral victory to the plaintiff, together with a ruling that would act as a deterrent upon all naughty photographers thereafter.

However, the discreet law reporter does add that the defendants were also asked to "agree to pay a sum" to the Artists' Benevolent Institution.

* * *

"A sum." Ominous? Probably not.

Anyhow, that—or the extent of it—was, one guesses, the only matter in dispute.

And it wasn't disputed long. The sum—whatever its size—was at length agreed upon:

"Mr. T. Dawson, for the defendants, assented, and his lordship directed accordingly."

So the statue of Armed Liberty and its owners are, inferentially, protected—and there, you may say, is a happy ending to the cause.

Well—only perhaps.

Isn't there another interested party who may yet be heard from? It is notorious that he holds derby hats in abhorrence. What about that photograph's laceration to his feelings?

There may yet lie against the former defendants an action for damages to Mr. G. B. Shaw.

Our Frog Pond.

In our old home paper, The Washington (D. C.) Post of Monday's issue, the main headline on first page reads "Twenty thousand cars drive 80,000 people through a pouring rain to witness the cherry blossoms." Of course, cherry blossom time is beautiful in Washington, because it comes at the most beautiful time of the year in that city—when all of the lovely shrubbery, magnolia trees, etc., are also in full bloom.

We have often wondered, however, what a thrill these Easterners would get who drive from Pennsylvania, New York State, Delaware, New Jersey and Ohio to take a look at those cherry trees which the Japanese gave to the Government during McKinley's reign, if, instead of seeing six or eight acres of these blooms, they could drive for hours through the Santa Clara Valley and see many thousands of acres of cherry blossoms, prune blossoms and apricots, all at the same time.

It would be like comparing a frog pond with a beautiful lake. Some day hundreds of thousands of those Easterners are going to have the privilege of seeing our blossoms and many of them will become residents of this valley and the great State of ours.

Another Movement.

HAROLD FRITSCHE has got up another movement. He's good that way. Just as some fellows are good at jerking soda, some at law, some at newspaper work, Harold is good at getting up movements. This one seems to be about as good a movement as Harold ever got up, too.

Or at least, I presume it's Harold's movement. He was there and when Harold and a movement are in the same place at the same time it's likely to be Harold's movement. This one is called the "Declaration of Independence of the Soil." It's not as catchy a name as some of Harold's movements have been, but when you once get the words out they are right high sounding. It's a political movement, not that all of Harold's repertoire of movements is political. He gets up movements of all kinds. This one just happens to be a political movement.

The meeting was held out in Dearborn, Mich., a few days ago. Francis P. Garvin, head of the Chemical Foundation, was there; C. L. Bardo, of the National Manufacturers Association; Col. Knox, of the Chicago Daily News and prominently mentioned as a presidential possibility; Irenee du Pont, who, along with other members of the family, seems to be the country's best bet when one wants to get up a movement; Mr. Sibley, the new head of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Henry I. Harriman, the former head, and Merle Thorpe, himself. There was an imposing list of others or a list of imposing others, either way you want to take it.

What is important also, they had representatives of the American Farm Bureau and the National Grange there. All of those present agreed upon an emancipation of the tillers of the soil from the New Deal. No independence movement is quite up to snuff unless the papers are signed on Abraham Lincoln's table, so Henry Ford lent the gathering a Lincoln table and the declaration was drawn up on it. It came from his collection of antiques. Henry's contribution to freedom, so to speak.

• • • •

The purpose of the movement, of course, is to get the farmers to shake off the shackles of the New Deal and then to have them adopt a scientific approach to their problems. The New Dealers call theirs a scientific approach, but it can't be. For one thing Mr. Garvin and Mr. du Pont, to mention but two, are in this movement for the scientific approach and obviously it would be foolish for them to be in such a movement if the scientific approach was now being made.

Some observers here think one of the most scientific things about this scientific approach is the way Harold brought these men together. I repeat, we all assume it was his idea. Col. Knox, Mr. du Pont, Mr. Garvin, Mr. Sibley and Mr. Bardo may easily have been thinking that was what needed was a scientific approach to the farm problem and that the present approach was a most unscientific one—after all, great men's minds run in the same channel—but it's a safe bet Harold was the one who got them together to pool their scientific approach, so to speak.

Harold is just a natural born getter-up of movements. He was associated with Will Hays in the 1920 campaign, the money raising end of it. Once when he appeared before Jim Reid at a Senate committee hearing, Jim asked him how he happened to always be getting up movements. It was because his father was a Methodist preacher, he said.

When he was 15 years old it was found that his father's church needed a new pipe organ so Harold organized the Pipe Organ Association. Then later, when his father had been transferred to another church, it was found a Brussels carpet was needed. So Harold got up the Brussels Carpet Association. He just sort of fell into getting up movements. They come natural with him, just like golf with some men or talking with some women.

There was considerable discussion at the meeting as to what scientific approaches could be made to the farmers' problem. About the only thing there was unanimity of opinion on was that we could use the alcohol from corn in our automobiles, that and shake off the shackles of the New Deal.

Victory In Cuba?

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE Cuban army has won a significant victory. Dr. Antonio Guiteras is dead. A long and dramatic man-hunt in Cuba is ended. The minions of Col. Batista have proved their valor and resourcefulness. Dr. Guiteras is dead. The forces of law and order have triumphed in Cuba. A fugitive from justice was shot. The whole Cuban army can now relax; Dr. Guiteras, whom they have sought vainly for many, many months, has been buried.

Dr. Antonio Guiteras was definitely a product of the frustrated social revolution in Cuba no matter what else could have been said about him. A terroristic and radical revolutionary, in later days he was nevertheless one of the most brilliant, though most erratic, members of the younger generations of Cubans who arose to fight against Machado, and after the experience of Grau San Martin, to fight American intervention and imperialism. Feared by Batista, respected for his patriotism by his enemies and loyally followed by his friends, Antonio Guiteras became almost a mystic symbol in Cuban life. He was Cuba's Lenin and Sandino rolled into one.

He was a young man of 28. Born in Philadelphia of an American mother and a Cuban father, and educated as a pharmacist, he went into the drug-selling business in Oriente. There he acquired his first lessons in politics when he organized the locality for a putsch against Machado. Apparently a tireless worker, and a man of much ability not only to organize but to elude his would-be captors, he lived through the Machado regime and finally found a post, when he was only 26, on the cabinet of Dr. Grau as minister of the interior, war and navy.

It was in this post that he first came to enjoy the rivalry of Batista and it was there that he first expressed his sincere interest in the underdogs of Cuba, being instrumental in the passage of many laws which were intended to favor the masses of his unhappy land. In the light of its independent character. That is, it was a truly Cuban government not "made in the American Embassy."

• • • •

AFTER the overthrow of Grau he drifted away from the Autenticos and organized the Joven Cuba, the Young Cuba party, which attracted not only many Cubans who admired Guiteras' courage and convictions but many from the other parties who were becoming disgusted with the pusillanimity and the fawning attitude of their own groups toward our State Department. In this party were some of the most brilliant of the extreme-left wing intellectuals of Cuba.

Working secretly, and it is said, at times wandering through the streets of Havana disguised, or shut up in some inaccessible hut far from civilization, he planned, after a careful study of the situation, a revolution against the trained troops of Batista who had been on his trail for months. He was a realist in many ways. He did not underestimate the strength of his enemy nor did he depend on fanciful ideas to carry his plans to success. He knew that against arms only arms could prevail.

And in spite of his Communist ideas and leanings, in spite of his terroristic beliefs he was realist enough to know that any program for the nationalization of the wealth and land resources of Cuba must come gradually and must depend in some measure on agreements with the foreign investors in the island. He apparently never had the idea he could defeat the United States and Batista too.

BUT he never lost sight of his ultimate goal and though his philosophy may have been all askew, though he may have chosen the wrong tactics to achieve his ends and though he may have had serious personal faults one finds even in the most contradictory estimates of Dr. Guiteras a recognition of his ability and of his ardent love for Cuba and for social justice for all.

He ran afoul of the authorities when he put into practice not only disciplinary measures within his own party but when he, apparently, resorted to kidnaping in order to swell the funds so sorely needed to arm the former soldiers he was preparing for the great coup against Batista. He was found guilty of crimes which justified the intensive hunt of the Cuban army, and it was as a fugitive from justice that he was killed.

A fugitive from justice he was. But from what a justice! Though it is true that in any other civilized land his crime would have brought upon his head the condemnation of society, he would have had at least a hearing in which a defense of his actions might have been made. Normal justice has long ceased to function in Cuba, however, and Antonio Guiteras was condemned without a hearing, in part because he knew that it would be futile to plead his case, in part because he had put himself outside of the existing law in order to serve what he considered a higher justice.

HE knew he was courting death. But like so many other young Cubans he preferred that to the servile acceptance of a situation which he could not stomach. And it was because of this that Antonio Guiteras had a loyal following which he used on many occasions when he was nearly trapped. Many of the masses looked upon him as their sole hope. He promised them what they wanted, food, homes, land and economic security.

Guiteras became something of a legendary figure in Cuba. Everything which could not be explained in any other way was imputed to him. He was apparently ubiquitous and from all parts of the island would come information that he was in several place at once. To others, however, he became the embodiment of the ideals for which many fought against Machado and the last standard bearer of the ideals of the social revolution.

The effects of his death must remain problematical. There are those who think that the opposition to Cols. Mendieta and Batista will now dissolve into thin air and that the present dictatorship will run on as did that of Machado. Others believe that Guiteras' death may serve as the signal for more desperate efforts against all those in high office whom his followers consider responsible for his taking. That the tension in Cuba has been increased can not be doubted. Even a Guiteras can not be shot to death without serious repercussions.

IF GUITERAS had been simply a fanatical radical the event might pass with little notice. But he was also a Cuban patriot who was fighting for ideals which many liberals could espouse. It may be as an anti-imperialist that his memory will grow and become revered.

This correspondent happened to be with two Cubans who were far removed from being in accord with Dr. Guiteras when the news of his killing reached this country. One had been threatened by Guiteras himself in a not distant past. But both of them showed distinct signs of being tremendously shocked at the news and sincerely sorry that the whole thing had come to pass. Both reverently spoke of him as another martyr to a Cuba Libre.

The Cuban Army has won a significant victory. Dr. Antonio Guiteras is dead.

Erosion Checked By Wheat Stubble

Panhandle Farmers Told Not to Remove Stems.

By the United Press.

Dalhart, Tex.—Farmers in the Texas Panhandle can do much to stop wind erosion of the top soil by allowing the wheat stubble to remain on the fields, H. H. Finnell, soil erosion service director, said here.

"Stubble provides almost complete protection against this type of erosion," he said. "The greatest mistake farmers have made in this section was to permit grazing of sorghum and other stubble."

"There is no physical excuse for permitting the Panhandle soils to be blown away," Finnell said. "The only limitations are economic and social—how much money will be available and how much farmers will do."

The use of a combination of several control methods is the most important requirement. Terracing alone, while a great help, is not a complete solution, but should be supplemented with proper terrace outlets, permanent pastures, strip cropping, sodding, or other control methods, the type and number being determined by the individual problem.

California Mission Claims Real Relic

Hollister, Calif. (U.P.).—What is claimed to be a relic of the true cross, on which Christ was crucified, has been found in the archives of old San Juan Mission.

Father Francis Caffrey said the relic was authenticated by a letter found with it. The missive was signed by Bishop Johannes Maria Odin, conference of missions, Rome, and was written to Bishop Thaddeaus, C. M., of Monterey, in 1852.

The cross is composed of two tiny slivers of wood forming a miniature cross about ¼ inch in size and contained in a larger silken cross encased in silver and with a glass aperature through which the relic can be viewed.

Notes for a Column.

CALL it "Toward the New World" and you'll have the Mossbacks blue in the face. Call it "This Changing World" and you haven't said a thing. Or have you? Good point, perhaps, to mention that most solemn of sun-dial mottoes: "It is later than you think." Gr-r-r-r! What a chill! Or that Brazen Head of Friar Bacon's said the same thing: "Time is—Time was—Time has been!" From Robert Greene's "Honorable History of Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay," played first in 1589. (Too encyclopaedic.)

All right, it changes. Plus ca change, plus c'est la meme chose. But the next time some one tries that crack on me of human nature never changing, I'll have him on the hip. "Yes," I'll say, "human nature never changes—but human behavior does." Let him look up Havelock Ellis, about those old primitive tribes (some still in the world) who used to go out and battle over a pig or something (what's the Saar but bigger?) until one warrior was killed. Then they called a halt, and the victors paid the dead man's family a couple of bread-fruit, say, so no one's feelings would be hurt, and it was all hunky-dory. That's what I call a gentleman's war! There's your "war-instinct" quite satisfied—and now see what human behavior has made of the critter! I'll bet I could find some neat text from G. B. S. about "progress."

THREE little books deploring war, $1 each. They ought to be 10 cents each and mailed free. Just so 10 times as many people could get the same gleam in their heads. (No. That's wrong—100 people have 10 cents where one has $1. This is no "liberal" dream. It's just like selling soap.

Let old "Gimlet Eye" lead the way. "War Is a Racket" (Round Table Press, N. Y.), by Gen. Smedley D. Butler. 52 pages of pungency. Typical passage: "There are 40,000,000 men under arms in the world today, and our statesmen and diplomats have the temerity to say that war is not in the making. Hell's bells! Are those 40,000,000 men being trained to be dancers?" Sometimes we don't see a fact till it's put up like a barn door.

"War is a racket . . . It is conducted for the the benefit of the very few, at the expense of the very many." And the general is pretty sore—here are the war munitions profits all over again. What makes reading about the nickel trust's 1,700 per cent increase in profits during the war so surprisingly jolly? I'm ashamed. It's probably the streak that makes us like to see the Satevepost hero get the $10,000 job at the end of the story. Where the general really bursts his collar-button is in relating that the soldiers, paid $30 a month (and half of that to their families), bought about $2,000,000,000 worth of Liberty Bonds. Paid for the war at both ends, you see.

So he says we should conscript everyone high and low a month before the draft, pay them $30 a month, and then see if we have a war. Also, all possible to-be-drafted men should vote in a limited plebiscite on whether we should fight or not. Also, the Navy should be kept within 200 miles of the coast for defense training only. Wise? Perfectly. Workable? Hmmm!

IT'S like turning off the loudspeaker to read Mary E. Woolley's "Internationalism and Disarmament" (Macmillan), a speech before the Kappa Delta Pi. (What's that?) Brief report at first on the conferences, commissions, reports and resolutions at Geneva. Why is that such depressing reading? But of course we don't like to look at the futilities in our lives, no more in the world's. But "futile," of course, only because not pushed enough.

Better is the keep-it-up, work-patiently theme. Education (expensive, but not as compared with war expense) so that: "War by governments shall be changed to peace by peoples." Why don't such generalities strike home? Maybe you'll get a spark if you quote the woman Dr. Woolley met during the war, a woman "of unchallenged respectability, of high social standing, the wife of a man of large business interests," who remarked: "I do not know that I ought to say it, but as long as my husband is making as much money as he is making now, I do not care how long the war lasts." Let him, or her, who is without sin——. Book is excellent for its reasonable, moderate point of view.

SYMPOSIUMS are fun. Herman Bernstein, famous "scoop" journalist, wrote 100 letters to big names throughout the world, got 40 replies, put them in "Can We Abolish War? (Broadview Publishers, N. Y.). Ayes: Jane Addams, Eduard Benes, Lord Robert Cecil, Dreiser, Feuchtwanger, Goemboes, Hoover, Heinrich Mann, W. L. Phelps, etc. Nays, Austen Chamberlain, Freud, Knut Hamsun, Dean Inge and H. L. Mencken. Quot homines, tot sententiae.

Best anecdote: The militant European general whom Bernstein once met, who said that "the only way of solving the world's perplexing problems was to start a new war." Bernstein dined with him another time, asked if he ever went hunting. "Never," replied the general. This type of sport does not appeal to me. Years ago, when I was a young man, I shot a little bird, and when I saw it bleeding on the ground a strange sensation of pity came over me. I never went hunting since then."

Pig Has Four Toes.

La Grange, Ind., (U.P.).—Floyd Lewis, living near here, is exhibiting a young pig born with four toes on one front foot and three toes on the other. Lewis' only regret is that the animal did not "go whole hog" and grow a couple of extra hams.

Municipal Jobs Held Longest By Librarians

Their Tenure Averages 11.5 Years, Survey of U. S. Cities Shows.

By the United Press.

Chicago.—Tenure of political office in American cities is revealed in a new edition of the Municipal Year Book, published by the International City Managers' Association, as longer in many cases than the average in comparable industrial positions.

Librarians, for example, were found to average 11.5 years of service in 1,000 cities, water works superintendents 10.6 years, fire chiefs 9.9 years and school superintendents 9.7 years.

Fayette E. Forbes of Brookline, Mass., is the senior municipal employe of the United States, the City Managers' Association found. He has been water works superintendent 61 years.

Mayors average less than 4 years tenure, but Mayor Harry Wooding, of Danville, Va., has been on the job 44 years.

Peter B. Murphy, of Marlborough, Mass., is dean of city clerks with 52 years service.

City engineer—Robert A. Carins, Waterbury, Conn., 44 years.

Police chief—Michael J. Healy, Manchester, N. H., 43 years.

Director of parks and recreation—W. A. Howell, Raleigh, N. C., and John McLaren, San Francisco, Calif., 47 years each.

Welfare Directors—Joseph W. Proctor, Malden, Mass., and Percy Horton, Portland, Me., 25 years each.

Austrians Plan To Erect Shaft To Last Ruler

Monarchists Will Build Church in Honor of Emperor Charles.

By the United Press.

Vienna.—Austria's monarchist sentiment is shown clearly in the plan to erect a monument in memory of the last ruling Emperor, Charles of Hapsburg, who died in exile at Madeira in 1922.

This monument will be in the form of a church with an illuminated cross. It will be placed on a hill at the outskirts of the city.

On the eve of the thirteenth anniversary of the Emperor's death, when the first outdoor public memorial service attended by more than 10,000 persons, was held, a meeting took place at the archbishop's palace, presided over by Cardinal Innitzer, and under the patronage of Prince and Princess Liechtenstein, to form committees to carry out the working program for the memorial.

Altogether 120 men and women out of all circles of Viennese society are on the various committees, including the wife of the Austrian chancellor, Mrs. Kurt Schuschnigg, and Mrs. Irma Buresch, wife of the finance minister.

One committee is headed by Count Alexander Pallavicini and the ladies' committee by Princess Fanny Starhemberg, mother of the vice chancellor.

The site chosen for the memorial is at the "Spinners Shrine" on a hill near here. This was the overland route of the Crusaders from Palestine. The story is that the wife of a princely Crusader sat spinning here day by day, watching the plain below for the return of her warrior. Her patient watch eventually was rewarded and she had this Gothic shrine erected in thankfulness.

The sponsors of the project hope by the erection of this church to pay "a debt of honor to the deceased monarch who, as ruler, Austrian and Christian was an example to us all."

Landing In Virginia

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE English expedition came within sight of the two capes in 1607, and they named the first one Cape Henry, after the Prince of Wales, and afterwards named the second one after his younger brother, Charles—who became King Charles I.

They sailed up the broad estuary of the river which they naturally called after King James, and selected a good spot for landing on May 13.

The weather in Virginia in May we can not help contrasting with the weather in Massachusetts in December, which the people of the Mayflower were to encounter in 1620.

• • • •

Here they founded Jamestown; they organized a form of government and immediately proceeded to build a fort. The architecture of their first church was simplicity itself. John Fiske wrote, "For a church they nailed a board between two trees to serve as a reading desk, and stretched a canvas awning over it, and there the Rev. Robert Hunt, a high-minded and courageous divine, first clergyman of English America, read the Episcopal service, and preached a sermon twice on every Sunday."

• • • •

They were almost immediately attacked by Indians, who hiding in the long grass, shot with their arrows, killing one and wounding eleven.

The heat of the summer with insufficient food and the fever coming from the low ground, killed 50 settlers before the first of October.

• • • •

The Hon. George Percy wrote: "... Our men night and day groaning in every corner of the fort most pitiful to hear. If there were any conscience in men, it would make their hearts to bleed to hear the pitiful murmurings and outcries of our sick men without relief, every night and day for the space of six weeks: some departing out of the world, many times three or four in a night; in the morning their bodies being trailed out of their cabins like dogs, to be buried. In this sort did I see the mortality of divers of our people."

America was certainly not an easy conquest for the pioneers.

One of the most interesting river journeys in the United States is from Norfolk to Richmond. It took us on the old steamer Pocahontas from seven in the morning till eight in the evening; it was one of the most pleasant and most historically educational excursions I have ever had.

President of College Defends 'Co-Operatives'

Yellow Springs, Ohio (U.P.).—That competition can be secured only through the profit system of private industry was denied by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College here.

Dr. Morgan said that "producers and consumers' cooperatives, organized on a nonprofit basis for the benefit of their members, may have all the advantages of competition."

A cooperative which can not compete with private industry or with other cooperatives will die, Dr. Morgan said.

The cooperative movement is steadily growing in the United States, he said, pointing out that half of the agricultural products of California are sold through cooperatives.

Dr. Morgan said the attack on cooperatives in this country has been chiefly by private industry. He said, however, that cooperative banking has been severely restricted by law.

Texas Cotton Growers Await New Cotton Type

Edinburg, Tex. (U.P.).—Farmers in this area await the appearance of a new variety of cotton, which is said to attain a height of 10 feet and produce an extra long fiber. It is known as "Aztec cotton."

Seedlings already have sprouted, but they have not developed sufficiently to enable farmers to determine the nature of the plant. Approximately 30 farmers have planted acreage in the new variety.

The "Aztec" seed is rare and Edinburg growers are under contract to return all seed from the 1935 crop to the original owners.

According to reports, the seed was found in an Indian cave in Colorado. The discoverer planted the seed and was amazed to find that the stalks grew 10 feet tall.

Loadings Set Five-Year Mark.

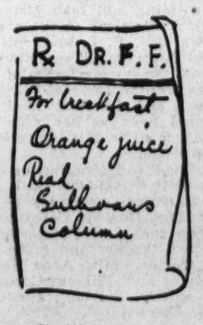
Martins Ferry, Ohio, (U.P.).—The largest number of loaded freight cars taken out of this city in any 24-hour period in five years was reported recently in the moving of 45 cars in one day, most of them from steel mills.

Henry Jones, who was sad and downcast for many years, is a happy man now. "It's this way," explains Hank. "It uster be when I got home I hadda eat outa cans or buy a hamburger down at Joe's hash-house. You see, the missus loved gossip and she spent her afternoons hangin' over the back fence tradin' scandal with the neighbors 'stead of gettin' supper.

"But I fixed that. I subscribed to The Washington Post and now she gets enough gossip outa that feller Ed Sullivan's Broadway column to last her all day. She says he sure knows how to tell things, all right."

But Ed Sullivan is not just a gossip-teller, a keyhole listener-inner, a Peeping Tom with a typewriter. Ed chronicles the doings of that biggest of all hick towns, New York. With Broadway and Forty-second street as his base of operations, Sullivan stops (briefly), looks (intently), and listens (long). The result is a column of news and gossip ... those little whispers which later roar at you from the front page headlines.

Another nice thing about Ed Sullivan's Broadway column is that it is written for the reader ... and not just to high-hat some other columnist. We know a college professor who once spent months translating what he termed "Broadwayese." For instance, he learned that "The Umphs who middle-aisled it Choosday yawning, phhht! yesdy. He's carrying the torch for a certain revusical eye-full now" really means that Mr. and Mrs. Umph, who were married last Tuesday, have parted, and that Mr. Umph is now in love with a chorus girl. But when you read Sullivan, you won't have to be a college professor to understand what he means ... for Sullivan's lines have sparkle, snap and wit ... and he doesn't depend upon a tortured pun to pack a wallop.



"Broadway," as seen through Ed Sullivan's slightly cynical but ever-interesting eyes, is as breezy as a cocktail party, as smart as a Noel Coward comedy, as entertaining as a ringside table. Not to read Ed Sullivan's column right after downing your orange juice each morning is to miss a lot of fun. Sullivan doesn't tell the news behind the headlines ... he tells the news ahead of the headlines ... and tells it five mornings each week in Sosthenes Behn, is now head. Miss Marvin is a graduate of Miss Chapin's School, and made her debut in 1931 in New York.

Interesting Outfits Appear Under Cloudy Skies Here Last Week.

Last week, when rain and cool breezes and cloudy skies were the order of the day, Washington society went about in smart woolens and was grateful. One of the interesting outfits seen was worn by Miss Vandipya Devakula, young daughter of the Siamese Minister, his serene highness, Prince Damrong Devakula Damras, and Princess Damras. It included a coat of soft sand-colored tweed with a large collar of blue fox and was worn over a frock of print on a navy blue ground, with a small octagonal shaped beret of navy blue and navy blue pumps. Her chamois gloves, of driving type, fastened on the backs of the wrists.

Miss Bette Hartz and her companion, Miss Marnie Barrows, were found in the park feeding pigeons. Miss Barrows wore a skirt of homespun in a peculiar shade of burnt orange, complemented by sweater and lapin jacket of brown and accessories of brown. Miss Hartz was clad in a suit of brown and beige checked wool, casually tailored, and a topcoat of dark brown and accessories of matching shade.

The third picture is of Mrs. Willard P. Smith, who visits frequently with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, and Mrs. Erwin. They were about to start for a drive. Mrs. Smith was wearing an attractive frock and coat of all black and Mrs. Erwin was attired in an ensemble of gray, with a three-quarter length cape. With it she wore hat and walking shoes of gray and a blouse of printed cotton.

The picture of Mrs. Henry Harrison Hibsman, who always wears attractive things, was taken as she walked along the Avenue in a model of "Skipper" blue crepe. It was made with a long blouse, caught in at the waist with a blue and white girdle, and on which was embroidered a Chinese motif in white. She wore a blue velvet beret and pumps of blue suede. Her bag and gloves were of the same shade.

Trails Marked For Pilgrimage Of Garden Club

Chevy Chase Tour Will Start at Circle at 1 P. M. on June 1.

A well-marked trail for the itinerary of the gardens to be exhibited by the Garden Club of Chevy Chase, Md., is being planned by Mrs. J. W. Murphy, chairman of the tour, and members of her committee. The pilgrimage will get under way from Chevy Chase Circle Saturday, June 1, at 1 p. m., and guests will be provided with lists and maps at the ticket booth to be set up there.

Gardens on exhibition will be marked with posters, drawn by Mrs. Frederick R. Parks, so that anyone may join the tour during the afternoon.

A list of the gardens on exhibition has been completed and includes the following: Mrs. Whitman Cross, Brookville road and East Kirk street; Mrs. William S. Corby, Chevy Chase Circle; Mrs. Hugh Southgate, 5800 Connecticut avenue; Mrs. Alfred Fowler, 6103 Connecticut avenue; Mrs. Chester Wells, near Jones Mill road; Mrs. M. S. Jameson, 13 Oxford street; Mrs. F. P. Wilcox, 6600 Meadow lane; Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Greenacre, 1 West Melrose street; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Arbremont, Upton and Linnean avenues; Mrs. George P. McCabe, Brookville road and Williams lane; Miss Emma Hahn, 6036 Daniels road; Mrs. Theodore M. Knappen, 2925 Tilden street; Mrs. George T. Dunlop, North Chevy Chase Lake, and Airlie, the home of the late Rudolph Kauffmann on Military road.

The committee is arranging for a hostess in each garden, and during the afternoon tea will be served in the gardens of Mrs. Erwin, Mrs. Kauffmann and Mrs. Wells, and is included in the tour admission fee.

Proceeds from the tour will be given to the Social Service League of Montgomery County.

Miss Dows Is Engaged To Wed Mr. J. L. Burling

Popular Member of Younger Capital Set Will Marry Harvard Graduate Within the Next Two Weeks.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Of interest to Washington society is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Deborah Dows, by her mother, Mrs. Tracy Dows, to Mr. John L. Burling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Burling, of Washington. Miss Dows is a popular member of the younger set of Capital society, having made her debut last winter. Her mother, the former Miss Alice Olin, daughter of Stephen H. Olin, of New York, has been active in musical interests of Washington for many years. Mrs. Dows' mother was formerly Miss Elsie Barlow, of New York.

Miss Dows is a sister of Mr. Olin Dows, well-known Washington artist, and of Mme. Knut Thyberg, the former Miss Margaret Dows, wife of a member of the Swedish diplomatic service. Miss Dows attended Holton Arms School in Washington, and the Foxcroft School near Middleburg, Va. She has spent much time traveling abroad, and, like her mother, is keenly interested in music.

Mr. Burling was graduated from Harvard University in 1934 and will enter Harvard Law School next autumn. The engagement of his brother, Mr. Edward B. Burling, jr., to Miss Carnealia Perin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Edmond Perin, was recently announced. Their wedding will take place on June 22, at 4 o'clock in the chapel at Watch Hill, R. I., and will be followed by a small reception at Sea Crest, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Perin. The wedding will be small and informal and the bride will have as her only attendant, her sister, Miss Anne Wallingford Perin.

Miss Dows and Mr. Burling will be married within the next two weeks at a small ceremony at the home of Mrs. Dows in Georgetown, when the guests will be members of the two families and a few intimate friends. Miss Anne Eustis, daughter of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, will be the only attendant for Miss Dows.

Miss Culbertson Makes Debut With Savoy Opera

Daughter of Former Ambassador to Chile Spurns Social Whirl for Career as Singer; Success Follows Arduous Period of Training.

It is always interesting to watch the debutantes of Washington after their days of frivolous pleasure are finished, for nearly all of them follow the debutante year with a long restful summer, and then return to Washington to pursue some bent, such as art, music, or just a hard job. Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of the former United States Ambassador to Chile, and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, is one of the most enterprising members of the younger set. She was presented to society here several years ago during her course at Bryn Mawr, from which she was graduated last June, and also made her bow the following winter in Santiago, where she spent a few brilliant weeks. Then back to work at Bryn Mawr.

This winter, Miss Culbertson has been in Philadelphia studying music—vocal—and plans to continue her studies next season. However, she has not been wasting precious time, for on Friday night she made her debut as a singer with one of the old and fine light opera companies, the Savoy Company, at the Academy of Music, in the Quaker City, when they presented Gilbert and Sullivan's "Ruddigore." The performance was repeated with great success on Saturday evening, and on June 1 the cast will give another performance in Wilmington under auspices of the du Ponts.

The Savoy Players were started in 1881 with the first performance in Mr. Richard D'Oyly Carte's new theater, The Savoy, which had been built to house the productions of the already famous librettist Gilbert, and his equally famous collaborator, Sullivan. The Savoy Company in Philadelphia sprang from a somewhat amateur revival of "Trial by Jury," produced by the late Dr. Alfred Reginald Allen, at the Merion Cricket Club in 1901. The success of the performance was such as to exceed the highest hopes of its producers, who determined to form a company which should in the future produce the Savoy Operas.

Miss Culbertson will stay with the opera company for a part of the summer, at least through the Wilmington engagement, and will then join her parents at their country home, Charmian Manor, at Blue Ridge Summit. Miss Jane Culbertson, a younger sister, is now at Bryn Mawr and will join her parents early next month.

Mrs. Grayson Opens Garden For a Benefit

Party for Scholarship Fund Will Be Held on Wednesday.

MRS. CARY T. GRAYSON, chairman of the scholarship fund of the National Capitol Division of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, will open her garden from 4 to 7 o'clock, Wednesday for the benefit of the fund. Her garden, with its beautiful boxwood and terraces, extends to Thirty-seventh street in Georgetown. It is a fitting setting for the fete of a garden organization.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, vice president of the division, is general chairman of the fete. Assisting her will be the other vice presidents, Mrs. Raymond A. Pearson, of Maryland; Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Virginia; Mrs. Ellis Yost, of West Virginia; and the directors, Mrs. Charles I. Corby, of Maryland; Mrs. Janet Scott, of Durham, Va., and Mrs. Roland Ringgold, of West Virginia.

The speaker will be Mrs. H. Hays Mirkle who will talk at 5 o'clock on "Rural Women in Albania." She will wear a typical costume of Albania.

The ladies of the Farm Women's Market of Montgomery County, under the direction of Miss Blanche Corwin, will exhibit farm products and serve tea.

Miss Stevens to Speak.

MISS DORIS STEVENS, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, will speak on the status of the women of Latin America tonight at the George Washington University, under the auspices of the University's Center of Inter-American studies.

The lecture, which will take place at 8 o'clock in Corcoran Hall, G street between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets northwest, will be open to the public.

Miss Stevens is a pioneer in the movement to secure equal civil and political rights for women in the Latin-American countries. She has traveled widely in these countries, and has spoken on behalf of the movement at Geneva, at Montevideo and other international conferences.

Society Gives Chapman Play.

THE SHAKESPEARE SOCIETY of Washington, at its closing program of the season at 8:15 o'clock tonight at Whitley Hall of the Cathedral School, will devote the evening to George Chapman, a contemporary of Shakespeare.

Prof. Thomas M. Parrott, of Princeton University, will speak on Chapman as a comic dramatist. A condensed version of Chapman's best comedy, "All Fools," will be presented by the Shakespeare players, including William Milton, E. A. Le Lacheur, Martin Haven, Theodore Freter, Geraldine Wells and Natalie White.

"All Fools" has never been produced professionally in the United States, but was once given by Harvard students under George Baker in 1909.

Stonewall Jackson Chapter, No. 20, U. D. C., will hold its annual historical meeting tonight at Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest.

A reception in honor of the new officers will be held from 8 to 8:30 o'clock and informal dancing will follow.

The speakers of the evening will be Representative Virgil Chapman, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Florence Jones Vining, of the Federal Housing Corporation.

Miss Dorothy Crook was re-elected president of the Barnard Club of Washington at its business meeting Thursday. Other officers are Miss Marjorie Brittinham, vice president and program chairman; Miss Henrietta C. Beman, secretary; Miss Ruth E. Henderson, treasurer, and Miss Rebecca Shannon, publicity chairman.

The National Order Scions of Colonial Cavaliers will honor Jamestown Day by a reception and dance Wednesday night at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets, northwest. The speaker will be John H. Small, of North Carolina. Miss Jack Ward, of Texas, accompanied by Miss Mabel Rolands, will present a musical program.

Mrs. R. Winston Holt, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Washington, will leave tomorrow for Wilmington, Del., to attend the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Delaware.

She will return to Washington in time to attend the luncheon Thursday at Holliday House, when Miss Florence Hyde, educational secretary, will hold a conference.

Delta Gamma Alumnae in Washington will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. William Lee, 5822 Moorland Lane, Bethesda, Md.

3. How is Ile de France (the liner) pronounced?
4. Is Morpheus properly called MOR-fee-us or MOR-fus?

Check Here.

1. In three syllables—RO-zevelt, but the second syllable is very slight, so that the pronunciation is almost ROZ-velt.
2. A fetter for the limbs of prisoners. JIVE, to rhyme with "five."
3. Eel du FRAHNS.
4. MOR-fus. The termination eus in proper names which in Greek end in eus, as Orpheus, Prometheus, is to be pronounced as one syllable, the eu being a diphthong.

Legacy.

I HAD A rich old great-aunt
Who left me, when she died,
A little sloping acre
With not a thing beside.

Nothing else she left me
But a clump of sweet phlox
And an old silver aspen
And some hollyhocks.

A humming-bird disputed
My heritage with me,
And so did a robin
And a gold-backed bee.

A cricket owned a hummock,
He couldn't say how;
Two wrens held a mortgage
On an aspen bough.

A toad claimed a corner,
(He said it was a lease).
We learned to live together
In a sort of cheery peace.

Never such an acre
To a mortal was given!
My good old great-aunt,
May she rest in heaven!

A Mood.

PLAY SOFTLY, now the day's motifs are cruel.
Too harsh tonight the themes of grief and pain;
Too shrill the blare of trumpet-sounded duel——
Play softly, like the lull of falling rain.

Play softly, do not grudge the tranquil minutes,
The fighting champion's rest between the bells.
Play softly, let the golden-throated linnet
Rehearse the tale that ancient beauty tells.

Tomorrow will be time enough for glory,
The roar of drums and tramp of marching men.
Tonight, the silent stars, the shepherd's story:
Play softly, let us see love's face again!

Transcendent.

WHEN SOME DAY I answer the final trumpet call alone,
Thus challenged, a dual self will rise:
Then the timid, lesser part will cling, as ever prone,
To that hidden strength that underlies
The eternal mystery of life since time began . . .
The divinely greater self in every man!

That self . . . the glowing, vital spark in you and me
Will lift the trembling spirit high
And soothing every quivering sigh
That greater self, that has a trust to keep.
Will lull its petty, anxious self to sleep;

Happy Her Heart.

HAPPY THE heart of her who thrills
To cherished little homely things;
A bowl of fragrant daffodils,
A yellow bird that sings;
A cupboard filled with willow ware,
A blue and coral breakfast nook;
A fireplace and a windsor chair,
A lamp, end table, and a book.

But more than those—far more than those——
A high chair and a cradle bed!
Happy the heart of her who knows
The sweet of "Now I lay me" said;
The savor of a good night kiss,
Small fingers round her fingers curled;
Happy her heart who feels that this
Is her career, her life, her world.

Let It Be Winter.

LET IT BE winter when you go from me
At last. Let all the bitterest north winds blow
Across bleak hills and fields of frozen snow;
Let there be no last leaf on any tree
Nor one brave bird to proffer melody;
Let ice arrest all little streams that flow.
In friendly fashion; let no afterglow
Light up the gray sky's chill despondency.

I'll say, should you note my unsteady hand,
"I tremble with the cold." Should I grow pale
You'll think it is the stark and ghastly light.
Wrapped, like the stream, in icy coat of mail——
I'll save my weeping for the winter night.

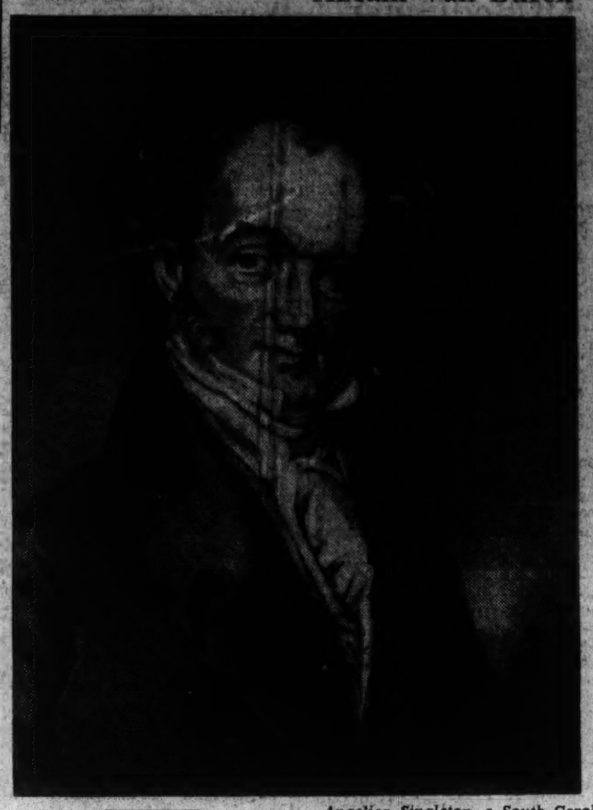
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Abram Van Buren—Angelica Singleton.



Angelica Singleton, a South Carolina belle, came to Washington as a protege of Dolly Madison. There she met Maj. Abram Van Buren, son of the widowed President Martin Van Buren. After her marriage to the President's son, she became mistress of the White House.

President Was Best Man for Son at Wedding in South Carolina.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THERE IS a rare little plant known as "Angelica" which adorns every garden fortunate enough to acquire it. Its sweetness, fragrance and abiding virtues distinguish it among other herbs. Thus among White House chatelaines one of the fairest of all was Angelica Singleton Van Buren, wife of Major Abram Van Buren, son of President Martin Van Buren.

Her romance with the President's eldest son and secretary was a legend in Washington society for several generations and she left in the hearts of the people an enduring record of her graciousness and sweetness of character displayed while in the difficult role of White House mistress.

A picture of Angelica Singleton Van Buren painted by Henry Inman now hangs in the lower corridor of the White House. In this portrait she is shown in court costume in a gown of white silk, a scarf thrown carelessly around her shoulders and with feathers in her hair. Her lovely face glows with youth and happiness and she is in striking contrast with some portraits of the more austere White House ladies

A still further description of Mrs. Van Buren made at the time of her marriage pictures her as "a lady of rare accomplishments, very modest yet perfectly easy and graceful in her manners, and free and vivacious in her conversation."

Oldest Son Made Secretary.

President Van Buren was a widower with four children, all sons, when he entered the White House. Following the custom of several Presidents his eldest son, Maj. Abram Van Buren, a young man with a brilliant Army record, became his private secretary and was soon popular among the younger folk of the National Capital.

Naturally, all desired to entertain the President's son and his invitations were as numerous as those of Washington belles and soft sighs were heaved in vain for him. But this was before he met Miss Angelica Singleton, of South Carolina.

She was the daughter of Richard Singleton, a wealthy planter of that State, of aristocratic family and great fortune for those times. She was born in Sumter district, South Carolina. Her grandfather Singleton and her great grandfather, Gen. Richardson, had earned distinction through their service in the Continental Army. On the maternal side, her grandfather, John Coles, of Albemarle County, Va., was a valued friend of Presidents Jefferson and Madison and two of his sons were their private secretaries during their Presidential terms.

Attended School in East.

In order that she might receive more educational advantages than were available at that time in South Carolina, Angelica was sent north to Philadelphia to attend Mme. Grelaud's private school.

When she graduated from that exclusive institution she was conversant with the languages, music, fine arts and all the arts of domestic management. As a reward for her industry she was given a season in Washington as the guest of Senator and Mrs. William C. Preston, of South Carolina, and as the protege of her distinguished relative, Mrs. Dolly Madison. Dolly Madison was charmed with the graces of her young relative and often attired in her famous black velvet gown which had withstood the ravages of many social seasons entertained for her in the quaint house, now the Cosmos Club, on Lafayette Square.

Soon after her arrival in Washington Dolly Madison arranged for her relative to be presented at the White House. President Van Buren was charmed with her and she became a great favorite with him. It was soon apparent that his son and secretary was not in the least indifferent to her charms.

As usual the hint of a White House romance caused a lot of excitement in Washington society. The happy lovers, however, paid little attention to the spectators and kept their own counsel as to the seriousness of the affair until shortly before their marriage in November, 1838. President Van Buren acted as best man for his son and all the South Carolina cousins were present at the nuptials and at least a dozen other romances began at the event in accordance with the old nineteenth century custom.

Ceremony in South.

The ceremony took place at the stately Singleton mansion in South Carolina amid the magnolia blossoms on the great lawn. The honeymoon over, Maj. Van Buren brought his bride to the White House which became gay immediately upon her arrival. President Van Buren rejoiced in the chance to turn over the social reins of the

She Was Received at Court in London by Queen Victoria.

Executive Mansion to his new daughter-in-law and in his joy that a chatelaine had arrived he had the President's Palace, as it was then called by some, refurnished. The east romo was newly painted and papered with a "rich, chaste, beautiful paper," many furnishings were bought for the green room and the table service elaborated. This aroused quite a storm in Congress which looked coldly even upon the welcome the historic White House was trying to give to its latest bride.

Miss Esther Singleton, leading White House historian, declared "the fact that the President imported an experienced chef from London and at once started giving sumptuous dinners to small parties of select friends created great discussion."

Furthermore, Miss Singleton gives us another glimpse of Mrs. Van Buren in her first public appearance as mistress of the White House at the New Year's reception which followed her marriage. "She was one of the few real beauties of the White House," wrote Miss Singleton, "and was admirably fitted to direct its social career, for her linguistic abilities put her at great advantage with the diplomats, by one of whom she was pronounced 'fit to grace any court of Europe.'"

Received by Queen Victoria.

In the second year of her marriage she and her husband went to England to visit her kinsman, Andrew Stevenson, American Minister at the Court of St. James. She was received at court by Queen Victoria, where she met the visiting Tsar of Russia, in London for a festive occasion. Louis Philippe at St. Cloud was cordial also to the visiting Americans. Her European memory book was stored with gala events.

Returning to America, Mrs. Van Buren resumed her duties at the White House. Society gossiped a bit about the wearing of three large feathers in her hair on her return and the revival of Mrs. Madison's custom of having guests announced. But it was not serious, and to the end of Van Buren's administration Angelica remained popular and efficient as White House chatelaine.

The story of this couple was not spectacular after the White House years. Much of it was passed in New York City. She was unselfish and she was never tardy in service to others. Her beauty remained with her almost to the day of her death on December 29, 1878.

Individuality Is the Keynote Of This Attractive Dress

Pattern No. 832.

IN THESE DAYS, when so much is standardized, it is decidedly refreshing to run across a design as utterly different as this. Its scarf is treated in a very unusual manner—a new kind of flattery for the face. The side-front closing is a pleasant shift from the usual dead-center fastening. Skirt pleats are tucked in below the hips in order to keep that line smoothly slenderizing.

This is the type of design that women with hard-to-fit figures will welcome. An instruction chart guides the sewing and gives directions, too, for alterations if you are not perfectly proportioned. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 44. Size 18 (36) takes 3¼ yards of 39-inch material, and 1 yard for the scarf.

A Real Approach.

When partners find strength in their combined hands upon the first round of the auction, there is no need to rush into a final contract. Plenty of time can be used for conveying of information for the purpose of reaching the right contract. This is all-important, as many slams are makable if proprely reached, but may be missed if every available bit of bidding information is not utilized.

A Laydown.

Most slam hands should be played in a suit rather than in notrump, in order that tricks may be developed by ruffing. The hand below, however, was played in notrump rather than at six clubs because North was anxious to have the opening lead come up to the strong South hand.

South, Dealer.
North-South, vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♣	Pass
3◇(1)	Pass	3♡(2)	Pass
4NT(3)	Pass	5♣	Pass
5♡(4)	Pass	6NT(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—With more than five honor-tricks, South feels sure, after his partner has responded to the opening bid, that a game can be made.

2—A rebid of the club suit would push mere routine too far. The cheap opportunity to show the four-card heart holding should not be spurned.

3—The immediate bid of four no-trump is excellent. It avoids a pitfall. Were South to show his preference for hearts, or rebid his spades, with no-trump, and if the final contract was no-trump, an opening lead through the diamond holding might be fatal. It is imperative that the notrump contract be played by the South.

4—After North's weak response to the four-no trump bid, South can do no better than to show his preference of North's two suits and leave the rest to North.

5—A very fine bid, based on the natural inferences from South's leap to four-notrump. South could scarcely make this bid without at least three Aces and without strong support for one or both of North's suits. North has no hesitation in going to a slam and he naturally chooses a no-trump contract to protect the possible tenace holdings in spades and diamonds in the South hand.

The Play.

Of course, the Slam was a laydown, as there were 12 top tricks without a finesse—six in clubs, four in hearts and two in spades. If the hand had been played at six clubs, East might have opened a diamond. In this case West would have taken the setting tricks before North could get the lead.

What Tactics Should Husband Adopt to Re-establish Firm Foundation In Marriage Shaken by Intrusion of "the Other Man?"

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: About a year ago I found it necessary for economic reasons to augment my income, so my wife and I decided to rent one of the two spare rooms in our house.

We had as neighbors a young Naval officer and his wife and during the course of conversation one evening she told us she was going to California to visit her people and asked us to take her husband as a paying guest until she returned, which we agreed to do.

* * * *

After she had been gone about three months we learned she had gone West to secure a divorce, and now after a year we still have her former husband as a member of our household. He is of a very quiet and reserved disposition and on only one occasion has he mentioned his former wife and that was to make a most uncomplimentary remark. He seldom leaves the house after he returns in the late afternoon and during the year he has lived with us has never had a fellow officer or anyone else in to visit him. The only time he goes anywhere is when he goes with us and then he always seems to enjoy himself very much.

* * * *

My work requires me to return to my office three or four evenings a week, and I usually return home about 10 o'clock. Before he came to live with us my wife would go with me, go to a show or go visiting or call in some friends to pass the evening, but now she seldom does anything but stay at home, and when I return it is usually to find just the two of them there. Now, I am devoted to my wife, and until a few months ago we were as happy as any couple could possibly be, but recently I have seen so many changes in my wife that I am convinced she is fascinated by if not in love with this man.

* * * *

Every one who knows her has noticed a difference and her most intimate friend remarked to me that she wished the man would be transferred from Washington. I also have heard, accidentally, of course, some unpleasant remarks about their constant association and attitude toward each other.

I have too much respect for my wife and am too deeply in love with her to accuse her unjustly, but I am fearful of the consequences of this situation if anything obnoxious should develop.

* * * *

Would you advise me to bring this thing to an issue and request this man to find quarters elsewhere? Or do you have some other suggestion or advice? I will be everlastingly grateful to you if you can help me out of this dilemma. Thanking you in advance, I am, sincerely yours,

WORRIED HUSBAND.

Two Courses Outlind.

DEAR WORRIED HUSBAND: This situation must be handled in such a way that the breach of understanding between yourself and your wife is bridged, not hopelessly widened, as it might be if you bluntly asked the officer to move. Two alternative approaches suggest themselves to me, since I suspect your wife is hungering not so much for the other man's love as she is for romance with a capital R.

* * * *

One approach is to meet fire with fire. Laying aside the self-consciousness which creeps into accustomed marriage, play the dramatic role of husband-lover fired by rekindled passion with all the fine fervor you would display if you were wooing her favor for the first time. Tell her you have felt her drifting away; ask her to give you another chance and assure her you will never again make the same mistakes; make her feel how genuinely you love and need and believe in her and find out what she is seeking that you have failed to supply.

* * * *

If she responds at all, arrange to get away together for a vacation of a month or so and use that time—if gained—in building up a relationship so closely knit that you can present a united front in clearing your home of a third person who is a threat to your married happiness. In other words, break down the barrier of spiritual reserve which has grown up between you since the other man came, by a passionate display of love, need and trust. Every woman needs tremendously to be needed, and it's possible you have seemed self-contained and self sufficient, while the other man has played on your wife's sympathies and emotions by dramatizing himself as a shy, lonely and grievously deserted husband. Since you need your wife as much or more than he does, don't hesitate to let her know it. Make her feel it.

* * * *

Now, about the alternative approach. If you are a man who could not give himself to unrestrained love-making and your wife a woman who would shrink from stormy courtship, then quietly but significantly suggest a matrimonial vacation which will give both of you time and opportunity to think through certain things which vitally affect your respective futures. Make this suggestion in a friendly, cooperative, but detached manner. Give your wife to understand—without saying so, of course—that you are supplying her with the rope necessary to hang herself, so far as your marriage is concerned, if that is her wish.

* * * *

If this is only a flirtation, and in no sense a grande passion seriously threatening the foundations of your marriage, such an approach may shock your wife into the realization she is playing with fire and due to get her fingers badly burned. If she hasn't made up her mind just how much the other man means to her, compared to you, it forces upon her the responsibility of making a definite decision. It has the added advantage, if she is inclined to flirtatiousness, of implying that you are aware, but leaving her guessing how much you care and uncertainty is the tie which binds the flirt.

* * * *

If her fundamental devotion is to you, she will realize it in overwhelming measure once such a suggestion is made. But if she is a woman of great pride, and such a "vacation" is entered into you may need to make the overtures when the time of reflection has passed, in order that she may come back to you gracefully as well as willingly and irrevocably.

* * * *

You must remember that only verities in this situation are those which apply to your wife and yourself, and that the naval officer is a more or less incidental contributor and participant. He has no foothold on the premises of your marriage other than those you have conceded him by failing—through neglect or inability—to preempt the leading role in your wife's emotional life. If potential compatability exists, you have the opportunity of reestablishing it more securely than before. If it doesn't, the outcome is on the lap of the gods.

Giving Child Stay-up Nights' Called Unwise

BREAKING into the regular sleep habit of children by granting them staying-up privileges one or two nights a week is bad business, according to child training experts on the staff of the New York State colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Children should go to bed every night at a definite time, should go to sleep within twenty or thirty minutes and should get up immediately after they awaken, experts say. Those from one to two years of age should sleep at least 13 hours a day; those from two to four years old need at least 12 hours, and those between the ages of four and six should have a minimum of 11 hours.

Furthermore, the experts add, it's a bad idea for parents to discuss the child's failure to sleep in his presence or to become overanxious because he doesn't sleep as this hinders the coming of slumber.

Strenuous play just before bedtime is one of the most prevalent reasons for sleeplessness. The New York child training experts recommend something quiet such as drawing crayon or pencil pictures or the reading of a soothing story.

Teeth Often Tell Your Home State

Human teeth are a pretty good geographical index. If a person has large, broad teeth, hard as flint, he is almost certain to be a Texan. Pennsylvanians also have tough teeth, while persons reared in the Puget Sound region and in the Michigan goiter district are likely to have soft ones.

These are conclusions of relief clinic dentists, according to The Forecast. Limestone is responsible for the good dental condition of Texans and Pennsylvanians.

Routine Sure To Streamline Your Figure

By Ruth Anne Davis.

If you have too many chins, too much tummy and hips like a baby elephant's here's where to go to have your curves carved down.

Here's where you trade your old figure in for a brand-new 1935 model.

Oh, don't think you just walk up to the manager and say please give me the works! It's not that simple at all! You have to have a physical examination. You have to join a class! You have to pay the princely sum of $8 a month. And then you have to attend classes three times a week. You choose your days and decide whether you'd rather go at night or in the morning. And then you start in. You'll have more fun than you've had in ages!

Romp Like a 3-Year-Old.

You row, you pedal, you toss the medicine ball, you climb the bars. In fact you romp like a 3-year-old. And then comes the real workout. An instructor will have you bending, turning, and twisting so many ways you won't know whether you're up or down. Just as you think enough is enough, off you go to the mysterious depths of the floor below. Here you're put in an electric cabinet and toasted from the tip of those chiny chin-chins to the very soles of your feet. Your pores open wide and gradually all the impurities that have been clogging your system seep out. Before you melt entirely away, you're taken out of the cabinet and a strong hose is turned on you. Talk about pep-par uppers—just you wait! It makes you feel chipper as a lark, brimful of vitality, and ever so "world is mine-ish!"

From here you'll be led to the salt bath. As you lie on the table basking in the rays of a sun lamp, it's easy to imagine you're thousands of miles away dozing on the shiny beach of an idyllic South Sea isle.

Scales Reveal Glad Tidings.

After the sun bath comes the trip to the scales. How you'll like that. Any antagonism you might have developed for these little truth tellers will soon vanish. You'll find them bearers of very glad tidings as you watch them register less and less as the days go by.

Many women who have been reluctant to reduce because of the expense or the trouble will undoubtedly be surprised to find out how much fun it is to loose surplus poundage by these scientifically planned and enjoyable courses. They'll soon come to realize that the fee will be one of the best investments they ever made. And incidentally—this present price is a special one for the spring and summer season.

Corrective for Brittle Hair.

Now that ever and ever so many people are "permanent minded" they ought to find out about a certain splendid corrective oil which goes a long way toward restoring health to devitalized scalps and brittle hair. Unfortunately, few women realize that the success of their wave depends largely on the condition of their hair. If it is brittle, dry and coarse, naturally the wave won't be as lovely and graceful as it should be.

The manufacturers of this corrective oil supply a great many beauty salons with cosmetics. Through this channel they learned the importance of having an oil with which to treat hair before permanents. After many months of experimenting they finally found this preparation which has helped hundreds of women normalize their scalp and hair.

While it was created especially for women who were planning on a permanent, it has since become extremely popular with those who simply want to correct bad scalp conditions and restore the health of their hair.

You'll find it very easy to apply and excellent to keep your hair in the peak of condition through the trying summer months when the sun does its best to take the life and luster out of it.

Summer Travel Kits.

Summer travelers will find that packing their beauty preparations is a simple matter if they own one of the convenient little kits featured in a downtown store. These come at three prices, $1, $2 and $3.

The less expensive ones are not fitted although their rubber lining and large mirror make them excellent for carrying jars and bottles.

Leftover Ham or Chicken Can Be Used To Advantage on Monday Dinner Menu

Biscuits Cut Shortcake Size Go Well With Meat Dish.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE HOUSEWIFE has a right to be in a blue funk on Monday morning. Her glorious repast of Sunday, so carefully planned, is a vivid memory of culinary achievement, and she faces the leftover problem once more. She can't fall down today when her family comes to the table full of curious expectancy and offer them just warmed-over tidbits.

Let's see, then, what can be done to rejuvenate beyond recognition a few slivers of ham, small pieces of chicken, the last morsels of roast beef or lamb.

If it was ham yesterday, it can be ham again today, but with a difference. Cut the ham from the bone, if there are still a few long even slices, wrap them in heavy waxed paper and store them away in the refrigerator for a cold plate for Tuesday or Wednesday. Use just the sweet juicy chunks that are closest to the bone. Make a white sauce of medium thickness, season it to taste and drop in the ham leftovers. Heat the mixture in the top of a double boiler.

Cut Biscuits Short Cake Size.

Now make your best baking powder biscuits, but cut them shortcake size, having the dough rolled about three-eights of an inch thick. Place one layer of biscuits on your greased baking sheet, spread the surface of the biscuits with melted butter and top each biscuit with another one, spreading in turn with melted butter. Pop the biscuits into a hot oven and bake until they are a golden brown. As soon as the biscuits come out of the oven, they should be split and served shortcake fashion with a piping hot ham mixture. You won't need any potatoes for this dinner, just two fresh vegetables and a fresh fruit salad to complete your dinner.

Perhaps it wasn't ham at all that you served for dinner, but chicken. In this case, remove the remaining meat from the bones and cut it into small pieces. Marinate the meat in a thin French dressing for an hour or so. Add crisp celery which has been finely chopped, and if you are doubtful about the quantity, add a few chopped hard cooked eggs, and perhaps a bit of chopped sweet pickle. Then the whole mixture can be blended with just enough mayonhaise to hold it together.

Attractive Cold Platter Makes An Appetizing Substitute.

Vegetables Suggested.

Serve the salad in tomato cups and place them against a background of crisp watercress. The accompanying vegetables should include potatoes and one green vegetable, potato chips or shoestring potatoes and fresh buttered lima beans will be a wise choice.

If Sunday dinner provided the leftovers of a roast, don't let it come to the table as hash so soon. Cut the remaining large slices of cold beef or lamb and combine your meat with another variety and several kinds of cheese. Now you will have an attractive cold platter. The remaining pices which are too small to slice can be brought forth on Wednesday in a different disguise.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Dale promises her husband, Michael, that she will give up her job in a real-estate office and keep house for him. But, worried about her mother's debts, Ellen defies Mike and goes back to her old job so that she can help with the family finances. Mike's displeasure and her independence result in strained domestic relations. Ellen is forced to work at the office at night and Mike is busy with his car agency, so they see practically nothing of each other.

ELLEN'S mother spoke to Ellen about it first. And she spoke in that particularly sarcastic brand of voice she had always used in mentioning her son-in-law. "So Mike isn't staying home very much of late?"

Ellen paled. That statement was true. But the last person in the world Ellen would have wanted to know about it was her own mother. "I don't know why you say that," making a loyal effort, as always, to defend Mike.

"They say he's out riding at all hours with the Hutton girl."

"Fiddlesticks. Marjorie Hutton hasn't enough money to buy a wheelbarrow. They're just using that as an excuse to get together. Don't believe everything you hear, Ellen."

"Well then," unhappily, "Michael isn't going around with Marjorie. I know that. Why, he actually dislikes the girl. You've been imagining things."

Mother Was Irritating.

Rose Mallory laughed in her own irritating fashion. "Ellen, you're a smart girl. Don't pretend to be dumb. Get busy putting two and two together."

That was exactly what Ellen Dale had been doing—putting two and two together and, unfortunately, getting five.

Night after night Ellen dined alone. Pride restrained her from calling Mary Tuttle at the office. To be sure Michael always sent a message, "I'm working tonight. I must see a customer," or "We're working on the books tonight."

Ellen didn't feel well—a tiredness, most of it mental, she decided.

Night after night Ellen went home to a lonely house and a lonely bed, too tired to sleep, even after she heard Mike let himself into the house with his latchkey hours after he should have been at home.

Ellen tried the old subterfuge. "Busy. They're working awfully hard down at the garage and this car agency is giving them considerable extra responsibility. He's trying to make a record in new cars sold." It sounded like a convincing answer.

But it did not convince Kathleen. "Well, that's interesting. But he won't make much of a record if he gives as much of his time to every prospect as he does to the one he's trying to sell right now."

Ellen wondered if Kathleen could hear the beating of her heart. But she managed a quiet question, "Is he having a hard-to-sell customer?"

Kathleen looked at her friend searchingly. "Well, evidently you aren't up on the latest gossip that concerns Michael."

For Her Own Good.

Then hastily, as Ellen would have stopped her. "Ellen, I'm telling you this for your own good. I made up my mind a day or two ago to tell you and, if you don't like it, well, it's just too bad, but you know I always warned you."

"Yes, of Marjorie Hutton." Ellen said, feeling her whole world sway before her.

"You got it right the first guess. Well, Mike and Marjorie have been riding around day after day. Marjorie inherited a little money recently from a great uncle who was fond of her when she was a little child.

"She's quit her job and she claims she's going to buy a car. That, at least, is the method she used to rope Mike into going riding with her day after day. But everybody in town, I guess, but you, knows she's out to get Mike away from you if she can possibly do it."

"Well, if she can," white lipped, "she's welcome to him."

"That's not the way to take it," Kathleen argued angrily. "You know Marjorie Hutton. She's little and pretty and sort of helpless. Mike's exactly the type who would fall for a 'clinging vine' sort of girl. Heaven knows you aren't the kind.

The Set All Knew.

"The point is that you're working and she's playing. Mike comes home to you when you're all tired out with your work at home and down at the Bensons'. And you haven't had a new dress in ages.

"But Marjorie Hutton goes to vamp him when she's all trigged out in the newest and the prettiest. And if you don't believe she's all trigged out then you ought to see her.

"She's smart, Marjorie is. She's pretending that she wants to buy a car. That gives her a chance at being with Mike. She's counting on her prettiness and the fact that you and Mike aren't getting along very well together to turn the trick in her favor."

"Who says we aren't getting along very well together?"

"Even if you never speak to me again," Kathleen said calmly, "I'm going to tell you. All our set has noticed. You and Mike have stopped going any place together. Why, you aren't even like old married people. At least, they stay at home. You and Mike don't even do that. I'll bet you haven't had dinner together once this week."

Kathleen's words came home with absolute truth. Kathleen might be frank to the point of insult but Ellen knew she had no better friend than Kathleen Works.

At home that night, waiting, Ellen thought it all over. There had been a brief message from Michael delivered via telephone by the kindly Mary Tuttle who always made these messages as friendly as possible.

"He said to tell you he'd be home just as early as he could but he's got a sales prospect and won't be home for dinner."

Might Be Business.

Ellen put the telephone receiver back on the hook slowly. Perhaps it was good business, this taking an automobile buying client out to dinner, although she'd never known Mike to do it before. But it might be a good idea, she thought bitterly, especially if the prospective customer chanced to be a very pretty girl, intensely in love with the salesman.

Scarcely knowing what she did, Ellen got into her street clothes. Her suit was a bit shabby—it had known two seasons of hard wear.

She peered into the mirror closely. Married only six months, but she looked years older. Could this white-faced girl with shadowed eyes possibly be the radiant girl who had flown home a victor from the tennis tournament?

She walked to the office. Mike's car was at the curb in front of the garage, the office lights were out and Ellen could tell that only the night man was in charge. That would mean that Michael had the demonstrator car out showing a customer.

Her heart lightened a little. At least, he was showing the car. Perhaps she was just a foolish, jealous goose. Undoubtedly she was. Whatever Michael Dale's faults, he was a sincere person. If he cared for Marjorie Hutton at least he would tell Ellen so. No, she couldn't believe that he would carry on any clandestine love affair.

Then why not wait for Michael—her heart was so willing to make excuses for him.

Caution Urged In Treatment Of Body Warts

Nitric Acid Applications and Electric Needle Are Best Cures.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WARTS have long been viewed with disdain by writers of prose and of poetry. Their irregular, unsightly appearance was associated with ill health by Dickens, and in the prologue to "The Canterbury Tales" Chaucer, in describing the miller, says: "He hade a werte, and there on stood a toft of herys!" The poet Skelton, in referring to a certain "beauty," says:

"Dame Nature hath her lent
A wart upon her cheke."

Both the appearance and the disappearance of warts are a bit mysterious. When we examine a wart, however, we find that its structure can be readily understood. For some reason, probably an unknown stimulus, certain cells of the skin (called prickle cells) in specific areas increase in size and in number. As growth proceeds there is a piling up of these cells with the formation of a tiny mound on the skin. It is as though some force from beneath had pushed up the outer layers of the skin. As a rule these mounds are richly supplied with capillaries, and they will bleed when cut or injured. When examined with a hand lens many of them will be noted to have a raspberry appearance. It not infrequently happens as a part of the process that there is a downward growth into the lower skin layers of certain cells that give the appearance of roots. Of course warts do not have true roots, but the cell growths in this respect are deceiving.

The ordinary seborrheic wart is of quite a different type. This is a rather flat brown elevation of the skin and is found on the trunk, the back, and the chest of individuals usually past middle age.

What causes warts? As youngsters we were told that we must not handle "hop toads," as to do so would cause warts to develop whereever we touched the skin of the toad. In spite of this precaution many of us had warts. It is now known that warts are infectious and that they can be inoculated.

Many persons still believe that warts can be charmed away, and enough remedies have been proposed which, if recorded, would fill a sizable folio. One "cure" calls for the persistent daily use of large doses of epsom salts for three weeks. A patient who had been given this prescription replied that he preferred to retain his warts.

Ordinarily the cautious application of nitric acid (the surrounding skin being protected by vaseline) is a satisfactory method of removal. When used with skill the scar remaining will be negligible. The electric needle, electric cautery, and zinc ionization have also been used with success. X-rays and radium have been of value where warty areas are extensive, particularly in the region of the fingernails. Seborrheic or senile warts generally yield to the electric needle. If skillfully employed, little discomfort is experienced and the cosmetic result is satisfactory. The use of some remedies may be followed by infection, and caution must be observed in applying strong chemicals to these growths.

Every physician who has made an attempt to relieve warts understands clearly the puzzle that attends their existence. If they can be protected from irritation a considerable proportion will disappear spontaneously following a change of climate or of diet, or a rise in the general body resistance.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m., and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m.

Too much confidence on this day may be just as bad as a lack of it. Be careful a sense of security regarding an action does not cause your overlooking an important detail. Conditions conducive to sharp practice in business trades should be guarded against. Transactions involving mortgages, stocks, bonds require care being exercised.

In social matters it will be wise to use discrimination, but it will be tactful to make use of some logical excuse, if necessary, rather than a blunt refusal to participate or accept an invitation. Married and engaged couples, as well as those with designs on some one's heart, will have to watch their steps today, as disagreements can be started on the slightest provocation.

If a woman and May 13 is your natal day, you probably radiate love and have a strong smothering instinct. Your desire to always be helping others will be responsible for your forming strong, as well as lasting friendships. Be careful outside interests do not interfere with your home ones.

You should have a very successful married life, as well, eventually, as the sort of home you have always had your heart set on possessing. Secretarial or office work, nursing, as well as clerking, should be satisfactory wage earning mediums.

If a man and May 13 is your birthday, the danger you must guard against, which might interfere with your success, is allowing yourself to get into a rut. Never take the road that offers the least resistance to your progress. Remember the mountain trail leads to lofty peaks. The army and navy, sculptoring, banking, as well as architecture, are among the professions in which you should be able to meet success.

Voliva Eats Pound Of Brazil Nuts Daily

Nuts form the chief diet of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, prophet of the religious colony at Zion City, Ill., and exponent of the theory that the world is flat.

Voliva adopted his nut diet 15 years ago after his fiftieth birthday. Most of his menus are built around Brazil nuts, of which he consumes about 1 pound a day in salads, cheese, nut breads and sandwiches, desserts and confections.

His breakfast generally consists of a dish of nuts, a glass of milk and an apple and he eats it as he shaves. Nut salad is his usual lunch. Supper includes a salad, nut bread and nut dessert.

Sons of Leaders Seldom Succeed, Savant Asserts

Sons of business leaders are deteriorating, in the belief of Dr. Charles A. Drake, of Adelphi College. Dr. Drake recently told the Association of Consulting Psychologists he had discovered that whereas a business man may have an I. Q. of 130 his son will generally have one of 112. On the other hand, he said, sons of mediocre families often showed extraordinary ability.

"This proves," Dr. Drake said, "that a talent for business administration can not run in a family." From this we may

British 3-Year-Old Weighs 105 Pounds

The biggest baby in the world is probably Leslie Bowles, of Lowestoft, England, who is less than 3 years old and weighs 105 pounds. Since his father is out of work, Leslie's diet consists of bread, margarine, vegetables, and, when the family can afford it, fish. Both parents and Leslie's brother and sister are small in stature. Leslie weighed only 7 pounds at birth. He can not walk because of his weight, but he thinks quickly and is remarkably strong. Doctors declare his size is due to fat and not to overdevelopment of the skeleton.

Wall Street Awaits Finale Of Bonus Fight

Auto Strike and Trend Also Cause Anxiety to Operators.

By Claude A. Jagger.
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, May 12.—With stock prices bid up to the highest level since last July Wall Street awaits anxiously this week the turn of events in Washington and Detroit.

First, the financial community is watching with bated breath the campaign for enactment of the $2,000,000,000 cash bonus measure, already passed by both Houses of Congress.

Secondly, it is keeping in closest touch with the trend in the automobile industry which has provided the backbone of the spring business recovery this year. Output in April was the highest for that month since 1929. Last week there was a substantial dip, reflecting the strike in plants of the Chevrolet Motor Co., and the five-day week started by Ford.

The appearance of favorable business statistics for April, some satisfactory earnings reports, and a number of other factors helped to lift the Associated Press average of 60 stocks to a new high for 1935 last week, but brokerage quarters thought the inflationary aspects of the bonus campaign provided the yeast for the speculative brew.

Between awaiting legislative developments, and clearer indications as to the mount of summer sluggishness which may be expected to engulf industry, Wall Street analysts have plenty to think about.

Living Costs Up 1% for April

Clothing and Coal Are the Only Major Items to Show Decline.

New York, May 12.—After a temporary halt in March, the cost of living of wage-earners advanced again, rising 1.0 per cent from March to April, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. The increase was due to substantial rises in food prices and rents; on the other hand, clothing prices and coal prices declined. The cost of living in April was 6.1 per cent higher than a year ago, and 16.4 per cent higher than in April, 1933, when the low point during the depression was reached. It was 16.0 per cent lower than in April, 1929.

Food prices rose 2.5 per cent from March to April; they were 16.2 per cent higher than in April, 1934, and 38.0 per cent higher than in April, 1933, but 17.7 per cent lower than in April, 1929.

Rents have increased 1.2 per cent since March, 7.8 per cent since April, 1934, and 7.3 per cent since April, 1933, but they were 25.4 per cent below the April, 1929 level.

Clothing prices continued their downward trend, which has been noted since last September; they declined 0.8 per cent from March to April and were 3.2 per cent lower than a year ago. Since April, 1933, however, there has been an increase of 24.2 per cent and since April, 1929, a decline of 23.7 per cent.

Coal prices decreased seasonally from March to April, 1.9 per cent, to a level approximately the same as a year ago, but 5.0 per cent higher than in April, 1933, and 8.0 per cent lower than in April, 1929.

Purchasing value of the dollar was 120.2 cents in April as compared with 121.4 cents in March, 1935, 139.9 cents in April, 1933, and 100 cents in 1923.

Argentina Appoints Central Bank Head

Buenos Aires, May 12.—Announcement was made today of the appointment of Dr. Raul Prebisch as manager of Argentina's new Central Bank. Dr. Prebisch was formerly undersecretary of finance under the late President Uriburu and has recently been connected with the Ranco de la Macion.

He collaborated with Sir Otto Niemeyer in the formation of the Central banking bill and has participated actively in all stages of the bank's development.

Oil Drilling in April At Top Level Since '30

New York, May 12.—Oil drilling in April advanced to the highest level since 1930, according to the T. S. Hose petroleum review, and financial statements of oil companies for the first quarter of the year showed favorable results in the industry's attack on depression.

The increased drilling activities, the review says, means that more money is being paid to workers in the field and to equipment manufact[illegible] in five years.

Finance, Business, Economics

Investors Switch to Stocks More Freely as Opposition to Inflationary Moves in Washington Appears Only Half-Hearted and Easy Money Pressure Grows.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 12.—The events of the past week have tended to confirm the conclusion reached by many persons latterly that the resistance to inflationary proposals in Washington is weak and half-hearted, and that the conservative elements in the Administration will not to be able to prevent enactment of several measures which will give the speculative markets and business in general a substantial, even if temporary, stimulus.

The fact that the Patman bill, providing for payment of the cash value of bonus certificates in greenbacks, received 55 votes surprised many in the financial district. Persons in Washington who essay to keep financial institutions informed of the "inside" of developments in the National Capital had passed on the word that the Senate would uphold a veto of the Vinson bill, which provides for ordinary cash payment of the bonus certificates, and that the upper house would give the Patman measure either no consideration at all or only a small majority. Actually, a switch of four votes would have been sufficient to give the Patman bill more than a two-thirds majority, sufficient to override the veto.

On Thursday the House passed the omnibus banking bill, including provisions which may be used to promote a marked expansion of credit by the banks for captial goods construction or speculative purposes. The next day, Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation intimated to an audience of bankers at Pinehurst, N. C., that a few billions more or less of national debt would make very little difference to a country as rich as the United States, and that we could easily afford to pay a couple of billions in cash to the veterans ten years before the due date, merely to get the troublesome issue out of the way. This attitude of extreme generosity with Government funds is the factor which the financial and business public regards as highly indicative for the future.

Investors Prefer Stocks, Real Estate as Result.

Brokerage houses, investment houses and trust companies report immediate reactions among their customers to these developments. People become fearful again of investing in fixed interest securities, especially now that the yields on first grade bonds have fallen to such low levels. New investment funds are going into stocks to a much greater extent than for a long time past. Furthermore, instances where investors are selling out bonds from their portfolios and buying stocks or real estate are being cited with increasing frequency.

This underlying factor explains the tendency for gilt-edge bond quotations to react somewhat from the very high levels to which they have been pushed as a result of the extreme easy money policy of the Treasury and the Reserve banks. At the same time, stock prices have been advancing and the volume of trading has expanded further, in the face of the Chevrolet strike tie-up and the tendency of business activity to recede due to seasonal influences. Investors and speculators are weighing immediate, less favorable business news against the underlying factors of easy money and an inflationary trend of thinking in Washington. The rise of prices on the stock exchange last week would indicate that for the time being the latter factors are the more significant and potent.

Easy Money Policy Will Be Intensified.

The financial district is looking ing for further intensification of the easy money policy during the the next two months, owing to the need of the Treasury to raise a large amount of new money to finance the work relief program. Excess reserves of member banks with the Federal Reserve banks now stand at a record level above $2,300,000,000. They are likely to rise to above $3,000,000,000 about midyear.

The chief cause of this rise will be the scheduled redemption of called prewar Government bonds having the circulation privilege, which Secretary Morgenthau said would be paid off with gold certificates. These gold certificates, now held by the Treasury in its general fund, will be deposited in the Reserve banks, and the proceeds used to pay off the called bonds held by the national banks, thus giving the latter over $800,000,000 new excess reserves. The Treasury is permitting the national bank notes themselves, to redeem which the banks have paid cash into the Treasury, to remain outstanding until worn out, ostensibly as an economy measure to postpone the cost of printing new paper money. Hence excess reserves will bulge out for a time until these national bank notes are actually paid off because physical wear and tear force them out of circulation.

Another indication that the easy money pressure is being intensified, presumably to facilitate the forthcoming new Treasury financing, is the lowering of rediscount rates in various Reserve districts. Several Reserve banks have reduced their rates from 2½ to 2 per cent, and Cleveland has lowered its rate to 1½ per cent, the same as New York. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York is held quite likely to lower its own rate to the unprecedented low level of 1 per cent before June 15. Of course, with rediscounts quite negligible in amount, a change in rate is wholly without practical significance, but it is designed to exert some psychological effect. Also, it is interesting as one more indication of what the British call the "expansionist" tendencies of those who guide the financial destinies of the Nation.

Transit Revenues Lower.

New York, May 12.—Transit revenues for the calendar week ended with Saturday, May 4, as reported by a representative group of companies were slightly less than a year ago, as shown by the Transit Journal indicator, which stands at 98.22, as compared with the corresponding week in 1934. For the week ended April 27, 1935, the indicator stood at 99.96, according to the Transit Journal report.

6% Dividend Will Be Paid By World Bank

Non-American, for the First Time, to Be Named President.

By the Associated Press.

Basel, Switzerland, May 12.—The Bank for International Settlements will close its fifth year tomorrow by declaring a 6 per cent dividend and electing a non-American president for the first time.

Leon Frasier, of New York, who became the bank's second president and maintained its dividend-paying record despite the depression, in one of his final statements before leaving for the United States, said there were still numerous difficulties to international stabilization of money.

Although he expressed belief that the United States would co-operate fully in stabilization, he said "there are several countries which are not in such an advanced stage."

Frasier cited England as an example of those countries which are "convinced it is impossible to arrive at practical stabilization without a certain equalization of international currencies."

Dr. Leonardus Anthonius Trip, president of the Bank of the Netherlands, will be elected president of the international bank at the annual meeting of the board of directors tomorrow. The bank's annual report is expected again to stress the need for stabilization of the world's currencies.

Despite a year of restricted world business the balance sheet for March 31, 1935, showed only 7,697,000 Swiss francs less than the same date in 1934. Profits also held their own, amounting to about 13,000,000 francs for the year, as compared with 13,007,072 for the preceding year.

Building Costs At Low Level

27% Under 1929, Survey Reveals.

Chicago, May 12.—Indications that current building costs in Washington may be as much as 27 per cent below 1929 levels was seen today in a report made public by the real estate and building division of the Olson Rug Co., Chicago.

Before launching a new $415,000 building project which was found necessary to handle the company's increasing business, President Walter E. Olson ordered a systematic survey of building costs, the report explained. Not only in Chicago, but in virtually every city from which figures were obtained, present costs appeared to be about 27 per cent under 1929 and 12 per cent below 1927.

"As a result of this survey," said Mr. Olson, "we decided that now is the time to build. Not only did we need a third unit to take care of increasing orders, but building costs seemed as low as they would go and were substantially under those of previous years."

$9,591,672 New Issues Expected This Week

New York, May 12.—New offerings of State and municipal bonds scheduled for this week total $9,591,672, says the Daily Bond Buyer. This compares with the revised total of $23,794,180 for the past week.

Mints Meeting Money Demand In 3-Shift Day

Clamor for Small Coins Attributed to Better Business Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 12.—Business is getting up a full head of steam in its money boiler, the United States mint. The steam supply—small coins that keep the wheels of trade rolling—has been piling up with a steady speed which convinces the Nation's money makers that business is better.

Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars have been pouring out into the coffers of business at the fastest seasonal rate since 1929. To keep pace with the demand, the mint has increased its coining force from one to three shifts, and recently added Sundays to the working week. Three hundred and fifty men and women have been given new jobs supplying the country with money.

Every time a shift changes, 1,000,000 new coins are ready for circulation—3,000,000 daily. This is only the Philadelphia "mother mint's" output, and the same thing is happening in the smaller mints at Denver and San Francisco.

Dimes for Chain Letters.

Why the increased demand?

"The sales tax in some States may account for some of the demand for pennies, and the chain-dime letters we've been hearing so much about may have an effect on the call for 10-cent pieces." says Edwin H. Dressel, Philadelphia Mint superintendent, "but the greatest part of the increase we must assume is caused by better business conditions.

"People don't hoard coins like pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars. And the only other place the demand can come from is business, for over-the-counter transactions.

"If a store is doing a rushing business, it needs more change."

From the crash of 1929, coinage had been at a virtual standstill up to March, 1934. For two months, not one coin was minted. In April, 1934, the money pump began working. The coin output for this year follows: January, 22,054,005; February, 12,529,000; March, 16,517,005; April, 21,493,010.

Transpacific Air Service Due This Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 12.—Making public the annual report of Pan-American Airways today, President Trippe said:

"During the year important progress was made in the preparations for early establishment of transpacific and transatlantic air services, a project upon which Pan American has been working for four years.

"With the results of this test work, together with the perfection of a new long-range radio direction finding equipment and a high stage of perfection in long-range operating technique, it is confidently expected that inauguration of actual experimental service between California and the Far East can be established during 1935."

The corporation and its subsidiaries reported net earnings of $1,064,000 in 1934, compared with $898,488 in 1933, after all charges. Earnings per share last year were $1.68, compared with $1.42 in the previous year.

Passenger traffic gained 14 per cent last year to a total of 39,550,959 passenger miles flown on the system, and the schedule of efficiency, as determined by the United States Postoffice Department was 99.74 per cent.

Dividend Changes.

New York, May 12 (AP).—Last week's record of dividend actions shows 18 favorable changes against 19 the week before, reports the Standard Statistics Co. Only one unfavorable change was noted, compared with two the week before.

Air-Conditioned Gold Mines Likely to Reveal Vast Riches

High Temperatures Have Prevented Reaching Fabulous Deposits Underlying South African Properties; World's Deepest Mine Installs Equipment.

Air conditioning has succeeded so well in one intolerably hot South African mine that another company has just ordered similar equipment, and the whole famous Rand District is expected to install refrigeration in order to keep on working the world's richest diggings, says Thomas Midgley, vice president of Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, in a report to the American Chemical Society made public here yesterday.

Mr. Midgley, discoverer in the General Motors laboratories of refrigerants used in cooling mines, points out that the heat and humidity in the tunnels 1¼ to 1½ miles below the surface have become unbearable. Even South African natives can do less than a third of a day's work during a whole shift.

Faced with the possibility of being forced to abandon untold wealth, the mine owners are turning to American refrigerants to cool and dehumidify the tunnels, according to Mr. Midgley. The Union of South Africa has canceled tariffs on refrigerants to assist in the air conditioning problem, thus opening up a free field for American products.

Deepest Mine Air-Cooled.

The Robinson Deep, the deepest mine in the world, was the first African mine to be air-conditioned. Its shafts had been sunk to 8,500 feet ,or more than one and one-half miles below the surface. The temperature in the tunnels ranged from 90 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit, with relative humidity 95 to 100 per cent. The efficiency of workmen had dropped to less than 30 per cent of normal. The success of air conditioning in the Robinson Deep showed the possibilities of refrigeration.

Now the East Rand Proprietary Mine has contracted for air conditioning equipment. The shafts have reached a depth of 6,500 feet, and the temperature in the tunnels is 82.5 degrees, with relative humidity 100 per cent. The contract requires that the air be cooled to 73 degrees Fahrenheit, with 10 per cent reduction of wet bulb temperature. The air conditioning machinery will be installed in a room hewn out of solid rock 6,500 feet below the surface. Water will be carried down from the forty-third level, some 350 feet above the machinery room, and chilled by means of a condensing system.

"It is also noteworthy that the Union of South Africa has taken off the duty on refrigerants so that the mines may secure them at reasonable prices," Mr. Midgley continues. "There are many mines in the vicinity of Johannesburg, and it is thought that all of these mines will eventually be air-conditioned. The English manufacturers of refrigeration machinery lost out in connection with these large orders because they had not the foresight to design machinery capable of using American refrigerants.

Possibilities Unbounded.

"The possibilities of this development are really enormous. More gold than is known of in all the rest of the world underlies this district in South Africa, but the great depths that it is necessary to go and the consequent high temperatures and humidities have heretofore placed most of it beyond man's reach. It is easily possible that the air-conditioning of these mines will result in returning the world to the gold standard and at the same time solving many of the economic difficulties which now trouble Great Britain and the United States.

"For example, the gold that would come from these mines will flow to the stockholders in Great Britain; the British government may take a goodly part of this in taxation to distribute among the unemployed as a dole; in turn these people will spend it to purchase the agricultural surplus in the United States whereby the gold will eventually arrive in the United States and get into the United States Treasury where we will carefully lock it up, much to the satisfaction of all of our citizens."

New York, May 12.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States in March, the latest month for which figures are available, was 13,120,000, according to Alexander Hamilton Institute. This represented a decrease of 221,000 from the February figure, but an increase of 76,000 over the figure for March last year. Unemployment in March this year was greater than in October, 1933. The unemployment situation has thus tended to grow worse instead of better since the short period of improvement after the bank panic in March, 1933.

That improvement occurred before the Government's measures to reduce unemployment were genrally in effect. This indicates, says the review, that these measures blocked re-employment instead of stimulating it in view of the fact that natural economic forces have been working for a reduction in unemployment since that time.

Chain Store Sales Up 17 Per Cent.

New York, May 12.—According to a compilation of Merrill, Lynch & Co., stock brokers, 25 chain-store companies, including two mail-order houses, reported an increase in April sales of more than 17 per cent over the same month last year.

Steel Upturn Lifts Capacity To 44.5 Per Cent

Mill Operations, With ½% Rise, Reverse Trend.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 12.—Notwithstanding a sharp decline in automobile output, and due mainly to recent awards for Government projects, steelworks operations last week reversed the recent trend and advanced ½ point to 44½ per cent, states the magazine Steel.

That Chevrolet not only expects to get back into production shortly, but also to recoup some of its loss, is indicated by releases to manufacture materials and parts, with instructions to hold them ready for immediate shipment.

This, in itself, however, was not a determining factor, as sheet and strip output showed further recessions; full-finished sheets down 2 points to 36 per cent; strip, 3 to 44. Total automobile assemblies for the week were 87,000, compared with 110,000 in the preceding week, lowest since the week ended March 9. General Motors was off about 18,000 units, Ford 5,000.

Labor Situation Unchanged.

Little change was noted in the labor situation as it pertained to iron and steel. Strike threats were aimed at some Eastern shipyards and at the Lake Superior iron ore industry, and even one or two of the steel plants, but in general steelmakers considered these demonstrations as a gesture to coerce Congress on the Wagner and 30-hour labor bills. In industries unhampered by labor difficulties production has been going along at a fairly steady rate. Tin plate mills increased operations 5 points to 80 per cent. Tractor plants are working on heaviest schedules since 1929.

Steelmakers are confronted with one of the most difficult price problems since they adopted a code—what to do May 21 for third quarter. Penalized by freight surcharges, affecting as many as 5 tons of raw materials for 1 ton of some finished steel products, they feel they would be justified in at least a moderate increase.

But after four months' operations in the profit zone, they now face the prospect of slowly declining activity until the Government's work gets under way in the fall—unlike last year when steelworks operations at this time were at a strong 60 per cent.

THERE ARE MORE GEYSERS IN YELLOWSTONE THAN IN ALL THE REST OF THE WORLD TOGETHER!
5-13-35

GEYSERS exist in numerous volcanic regions throughout the world, in South America, Japan, in Iceland, New Zealand and Yellowstone National Park. But in Yellowstone alone there is found a greater abundance of geysers than in all the rest of the world together. There are at least 100 real geysers and 3,000 or more hot springs.

An English land agent, Capt. Charles Boycott, was the first man ever actually "boycotted," for it was he who gave the practice its name, though, of course, not to his own liking.

When the inhabitants of a certain section organize to ruin the business of one individual by having nothing to do with him and refusing to buy his goods or do business with him in any manner, it is called a "boycott." And that is just what happened to Charles Boycott.

Because of his tyrannic treatment of tenants of Lord Erne, his employer, Boycott's life was threatened and all of his servants were ordered to leave him. His letters were intercepted, food supplies damaged and his fences were torn down. An army of nearly 1,000 soldiers was required to save him from complete ruin.

The first U. S. S. Texas was completed in 1892 and was the pride of the United States Navy during her time. But in 1911 the historic vessel was condemned and "sentenced to death" at the hands of her namesake, a new U. S. S. Texas.

Stories About the Pictures You're Seeing

Hollywood, May 12.

"THE INFORMER." Liam O'Flaherty's fine novel was put on celluloid in 27 shooting days and for a cost of about $350,000 . . . The suggestion to make a flicker of "The Informer" was Director John Ford's . . . Victor McLaglen was cast for the role of Gypo Nolan before the scenario was written, but the picture had been started before the role of Katie Madden was cast . . . This was handed to Margot Grahame, her first role in an American-made flicker. She came here because she is the wife of actor Francis Lister and he was signed for several pictures. Miss Grahame made a screen test for Fox but nothing came of it . . . For 24 days the actors and actresses worked in a studdio manufactured fog; this chemical preparation which photographs as a swirling mist makes the set very damp and generally causes the player eye strain.

* * * *

The scene in which Victor McLaglen is shot by Joseph Sauers was taken four times to get the take you see on the screen . . . Sauers fires an automatic pistol through the pocket of his light trench coat. At one shot, a flash from the blank cartridge ignited the coat and Sauers narrowly escaped being burned . . . McLaglen is a performer who generally has a difficult time remembering his lines. This fault aided him greatly in the questioning sequence where he is supposed to fumble . . . For the drinking scenes, Director Ford allowed McLaglen to swallow the genuine stuff to get a genuine performance.

* * * *

"G MEN." With gangster flickers barred by the censors, Warners put a badge on "The Public Enemy"—James Cagney—made him the "Public Hero," got around the censor question and provided the screen with a grand gang picture . . . Warners rushed this flicker to beat the other companies who were preparing to capitalize on Dillinger. They shot in five weeks and the troupe was divided into three working units. Director William Keighley rates the main and first credit, for he directed the story; Director William McCann was in charge of another unit; he shot all the chase scenes and some of the fights; while Director Jackman did all the process stuff. "G Men," for a brief period, was called "The Farrell Case" in order that the other studios wouldn't get wise to the fact that Warners was making a Government man picture. They did though . . . Real bullets were used in all the fight scenes in close-ups—the reason real bullets had to be used in the close-ups is that blank shots caused too much smoke.

* * * *

Several of the exciting fight scenes were filmed in this fashion: Boards, two by twelve, were put next to the camera and slugs fired into the boards right by the camera. The cameraman would start the camera going, he would get away letting the camera run by itself, and then the actors would shoot at the boards . . . Real bullets were also used in the machine guns. However, no actor actually fired a machine gun with the real bullets in it. A professional machine gunner was employed for this. His name is George Daly. He never appears in the picture but he did the same job in "Public Enemy" and "Little Caesar" . . . One night, while they were filming a fight scene, a Frenchman came on the rear street set to visit Jimmy Cagney. They were talking in a temporary dressing room and the shooting was going on farther down the street. "Sounds like the Battle of the Marne, doesn't it?" said Cagney. And the Frenchman, with a quizzical smile, answered: "The music of the future."

"GOING TO TOWN." This latest Mae West flicker was originally titled "Now I'm a Lady," but was changed by Miss West while the picture was in production, because she didn't want to do anything to offend the the censors. The picture was practically three months in production, due to retakes or added scenes. . . . After one preview "Going to Town" went to the Paramount ranch to film those scenes of Miss West on a horse which weren't in the first print. . . . After another preview "Going to Town" went back to the studio for retakes on the opera sequence; it was decided to kid it instead of playing it straight. . . . On the set one day just after Miss West had finished playing a scene in which she was told that she wasn't welcomed by society, Lord and Lady Byng visited Miss West and had tea with her. . . . The assistant director didn't believe that the guests were really the titled people and shouted, "Byng . . . Byng. Here come the British."

* * * *

This picture, although it may not look it, was very expensive to produce and cost about $800,000 . . . Mae West, alone, receives a salary almost equal to that of Greta Garbo, although this fact has not been publicized . . . Paul Cavanaugh, Mae's leading man in the flicker, became her leading man on the set and off for a while. He took a great liking to her and they became very friendly . . . The screen play of "Going to Town" was written by Miss West herself from an original story she had Paramount purchase for her. Mae West does all her writing in bed.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

THE new simplified efficiency rating system, developed by the Civil Service Commission in cooperation with the Council of Personnel Administration (an organization of representatives of the various departments and independent establishments) will be prepared for introduction Wednesday.

BAKER.

The revised plan is designed, among other things to conform to the requirements of Section 9 of the Classification Act; to determine the specific strengths and weaknesses of the employe in order to provide a basis for helping him improve himself, and thus result in an improvement of the service.

It is further designed to eliminate the time-consuming computations involved in the previous system; to eliminate the unknown element weights which, under the previous system, prevented the rating officer from knowing the significance of his ratings as he rated and to do away with minute numerical distinctions in ratings.

Scope of the new plan will include all employes occupying positions in departmental service which are subject to the classification act of 1923, except those occupying positions allocated to grades 6, 7, 8 and 9 of the professional and scientific service, and grades 13, 14, 15 and 16 of the clerical, administrative and fiscal service.

Notations to be used are in calsses: 1, underlinings; 2, plus; 3, minus; 4, check and ratings expressed by numbers.

The underlinings will indicate the rating officer's estimate of the relative importance of the various elements for that particular position.

The plus, minus and check marks are the record of the rating officer's estimate of how well the employe meets the various requirements of the position.

Treasury Local No. 262 will hold a bingo party with prizes and refreshments at 8 p. m. today at 710 Fourteenth street northwest. W. E. Perry and Fred Rehm are running first and second, respectively, in the membership drive of No. 262. The winner will go to Atlantic City with all expenses paid.

Bureau of Animal Industry.

Miss Matilda Hartman entertained Animal Husbandry Division employes at tea yesterday afternoon. Dr. H. C. McPhee, chief, Animal Husbandry Division, is visiting experiment stations in North Carolina. Miss Regina Kelly was called to Albany, N. Y., recently because of death of an aunt, Mrs. Nelly LeMar.

Mrs. Ella Raulerson enjoyed the week-end with relatives in Mahaney Plane, Pa. Mrs. Esther Norris (C), has returned to her desk after several days' illness. Miss Edna Reagan spent the week-end with relatives in Virginia. Al Moe entertained messenger boys of the bureau at his home last week.

Mrs. Ada M. Riley (F), Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy, announces the Rhode Island State Society, of which she is secretary, will give a bingo party at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the War Mothers Club, 1527 New Hampshire avenue northwest. All Rhode Islanders in Government service are invited to attend.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor, today, between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Earl Carroll's Vanities; screen, Charles Butterworth, in "Baby Face Harington"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Frederic March and Charles Laughton in "Les Miserables"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (second week of Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi and Elizabeth Allan, in "Mark of the Vampire").

MIGHTY MINUTES.

In former times there used to be
A chance for employes like we Occasionally to spend a day
As help at home or else to stray
To ball park or perhaps just mope—
Away from work.

Now we must watch our every hour
Each minute's leave has grown in power—
One day a month; an hour a week
If taken is sufficient leak
To blight vacation, that fond hope
Of rest from work.

A Civil Server (F).

AMONG Government people on the floor committee for the Georgia State Society's ball and reception for the press at the Shoreham Hotel Friday night are: Theodore Tiller (P), director of information, HOLC; Representative B. Frank Whelchel, Horace Russell, general counsel, HOLC; Robert Fichner, director Emergency Conservation Work; L. W. Robert Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Ashley Sellers, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Peter Twitty, attorney, Navy; Maj. Charles L. Dasher, assistant to the director, Bureau of the Budget; Gibbs Lyons, deputy comptroller of the currency; Col. S. Gordon Green, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy; John A. Massey, jr., chief, Money Order Division, Government Printing Office; Frank H. Greer Land Division, RFC.

Poderjay Gets Letter In Cell From Wife No. 1

Ossining, N. Y., May 12 (AP).—Sing Sing officials disclosed today that Capt. Ivan Poderjay, 35, in prison for his bigamous marriage to the missing Miss Agnes Tufverson, has received a letter from his first wife, Suzanne Ferrand, of London, England. It is said to be the only letter he has received from her since his incarceration two months ago.

Poderjay, who can speak more than a half-dozen languages fluently, has been doing menial tasks since he reached Sing Sing. He is classified as "first broom" and his duties are to sweep and mop the prison corridors.

O'Connor's Partner Killed in Car Crash

Los Angeles, May 12 (AP).—Christopher J. Mulvane, prominent attorney and law partner of J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, was killed last night in a head-on collision of motor cars.

The driver of the other machine, Victor L. Ward, 35, of Salinas, Calif., was held on suspicion of manslaughter. Detective Lieut. Allan Baldridge said his investigation showed Ward had been drinking and was driving on the wrong side of the street.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

A few radio rambles—

Margaret McCravey, McCravy or MacCravy (the studio isn't sure) sounds particularly soothing against Sidney's Singing Strings on the WJSV Sunday spot. She is probably no future Metropolitan star, but her voice is easy to listen to. A nice program that. . . . Radio City Music Hall is doing a fine job with the Wagner series on Sunday. Good opportunity to catch up on one's operatic education. Music Hall explains that since there will be no festival at Beyreuth in honor of the composer's birth, they'll take care of it with their series. . . .

Cornelia Otis Skinner, beautiful and talented actress with the one-woman show, is scheduled to appear on an air spot around the first of June. . . .

NBC and CBS are all mixed up about a frog jumping contest. Both are celebrating Mark Twain's famous venture; NBC in Central Park, New York, and Columbia at Angels Camp, Calif. . . . This comes off on Saturday next on Columbia and Sunday next on NBC. . . .

How do you like Ethel Merman's new spot? Opinions differ—if you like Ethel you'll like the show, if not, you'll think Al Goodman's orchestra is the best thing on the half hour. Ethel's screaming is the high-spot. . . . And now, we'd better get on with the day's program.

High-spots:

Al Pearce and his gang are back on WRC at 1:30 p. m.

"Happy Hollow," a six-year-old feature of KMBC, Kansas, becomes a network feature. On WJSV today at 1:45 p. m. It is written and directed by Everett Kemp, who also plays the role of Uncle Ezra.

Last installment of NBC's "Cyrano de Bergerac" is on WMAL, 3:30 p. m.

Most beautiful woman of the week is interviewed on WOL by Edmund, Queen Marie's beautician. She is Collette D'Arville, of the Opera Comique, Paris. At 2:15.

Francia White solos with the Gypsies on WRC at 9 p. m., hustles off to play in "Music at the Haydn's" at 9:30, WRC. Busy lady.

"Lovers Can't Lose" is the dramatic offering on WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Speeches:

Secretary Morgenthau, "The American Dollar," WJSV and WRC, 10 p. m.

Representative Kleberg, "Domestic Fats and Oil Legislation." WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Lithuanians to Dine Waitkus, Ocean Flier

Lieut. Felix Waitkus, Air Corps reserve officer formerly attached to Kelly Field, who is planning a nonstop flight from America to Lithuania, will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by the American Lithuanian Society of Washington at the Washington Hotel May 28.

Lieut. Waitkus' plane, the Lithuanica II, was christened yesterday in Chicago. He is expected to take off from Floyd Bennett Airport in New York early in June. A meeting of society officials will be held at the Washington Hotel Wednesday at 8:15 p. m. to complete arrangements for the dinner.

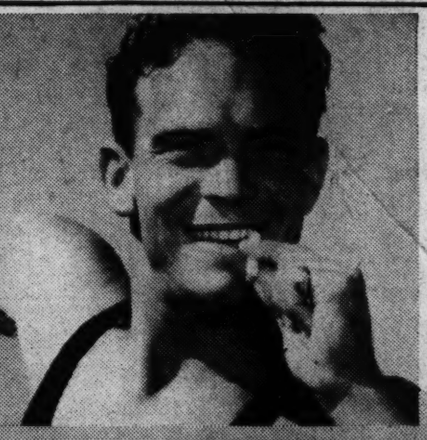
ATHLETES SAY:
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"



HAROLD ("DUTCH") SMITH, Olympic Diving Champion, has smoked Camels for nine years—smoked Camels even before he took up diving. Among his team-mates on the American Olympic squad who are also Camel fans are: Leo Sexton, Helene Madison, Jim Bausch, Bill Miller, Josephine McKim, and Georgia Coleman.

Read below what leading sports champions say about Camels

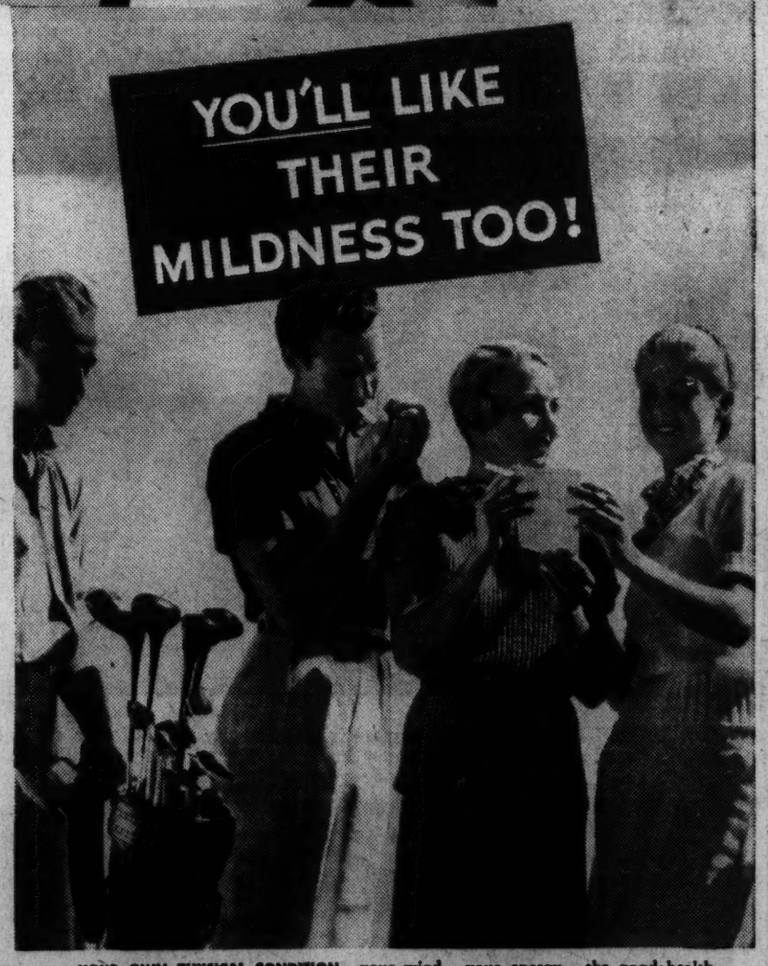
With the preference of star athletes overwhelmingly for one cigarette, that cigarette has to be exceptionally mild! Its name is well known to you—Camel. Here's what an Olympic champion diver, Harold ("Dutch") Smith, says about Camels: "I've found a great deal of pleasure in Camels. They never interfere with my wind." Rip Collins, of the St. Louis Cardinals, says: "Here's the best proof I know that Camels are mild: I can smoke them steadily, and they never get my wind."

Rowland Dufton, squash star of the New York A. C., says: "Squash is a game that requires A1 condition for tournament play. I've found that Camels are so mild I can smoke all I want, and they never upset my nerves or get my wind. That's what I call real mildness!"

Dick Shelton, world-champion steer dogger, says: "I must be sure the cigarettes I smoke are mild. Camels are very mild—don't get my wind." And those two brilliant golfers, Denny Shute and Helen Hicks, have come to the same conclusion—"Camels do not get my wind."

How this mildness is important to you too!

Camel smokers can smoke more—and enjoy smoking more, knowing that sports champions have found Camels so mild that they never jangle their nerves or get their wind.



YOUR OWN PHYSICAL CONDITION—your wind...your energy...the good-health of your nerves—is important to you too. So remember this: Camels are so mild you can smoke all you want. Athletes say Camels never get their wind or nerves.

SO MILD! YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!
Camels

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

2 Facing Trial For Murder Of Aged Pair

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 12.—Two Negroes, each blaming the other, will go on trial in Spotsylvania County Circuit Court at 10 a. m. Tuesday for the murder of elderly John Thomas Coleman and his 70-year-old wife at their prosperous homestead 10 miles west of this city early in the evening of April 2.

The two Negroes, John Shell, 37, and Joe Jackson, 23, the former arrested in Haverstraw, N. Y., after a chase through several Northern States, are in the Henrico County Jail.

Heavily Guarded.

Ten State motorcycle officers will escort the prisoners to Spotsylvania Tuesday morning.

Jackson made a statement to the court following his indictment for the murder by a special Spotsylvania grand jury, in which he said that he remained at the road leading into the Coleman home while Shell went up to the house with the intention to rob the elderly couple. He says he knew nothing of the murder until reading of it in the newspapers.

Shell, on the other hand, in a written confession made before Jackson at Henrico Jail, says he was upstairs in the Coleman dwelling trying to locate money when the murder was committed. Jackson, he says, told him that the Colemans recognized them and he had to get rid of the couple to escape arrest.

Sager Heads Defense.

Harry Sager, prominent Fredericksburg attorney, has been appointed by Judge Frederick W. Coleman to represent the men in Tuesday's trial. There will be no defense witnesses, it is said. The prosecution, which will be in the hands of Commonwealth's Attorney Emmett R. Carner, assisted by S. Bernard Coleman, candidate for the Virginia Senate, has summoned fourteen witnesses.

Attorneys are of the opinion that the case will be concluded in a day. The prosecution will ask the jury to impose the death sentence.

The murder, which occurred on the evening of April 2, was not revealed until the following morning when Tom Braxton, a Negro farm hand, missed the couple. A search revealed their bodies in the well a short distance from their home. Their car was missing. A filling station attendant where the suspects had stopped to buy cigarettes, gave Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes a description of the two men which tallied with Jackson and Snell.

Milk Law Test Due in Richmond

Injunction Involving Rule to Be Argued May 24.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 12.—The first step in a move to test the State milk law will be taken May 24, when attorneys will appear before Judge Frank T. Sutton, jr., of the Richmond Law and Equity Court, to argue the question of dissolving a temporary injunction against Henry T. Patrick, Campbell County producer.

Senator Charles E. Burk, of this city, will represent Patrick. The State will be represented by the attorney general's office.

Under the injunction Patrick is required to sell his milk at a cent more than the standard price because of the high butter fat content. He holds he should be allowed to sell at the standard price The injunction will expire June 1.

Byrd Families Attend Church In Winchester

Special Communion Services Held for Explorer and Relatives.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., May 12.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, here from his most recent conquest of the Antarctic, attended special communion services in Christ Episcopal Church today with members of his immediate family, his mother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, and the family of his brother, Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

The service for the Byrd family was held shortly after the regular services. The parish rector, the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, was celebrant.

It was the first time in several years the entire family had been together.

In deference to Admiral Byrd's wishes, Winchester held no public celebration on his return, but Mayor C. R. Anderson sent the explorer's wife a large basket of roses in the name of the city.

Admiral and Mrs. Byrd intend to leave tomorrow morning for Washington and thence to Boston, where a public reception is to be held Wednesday.

Many of the admiral's boyhood friends called on him today.

Grocers Plan Receipts Tax Test in Court

'Fresh Egg' Law, Milk Regulations Also Up for Discussion.

State Parley Sessions in Full Swing at Cumberland.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., May 12.—More than 200 grocers from all sections of the State arrived here today to attend the seventh annual convention of the Maryland Independent Retail Grocers Association.

A "rattlesnake dinner" tonight was the opening event of the two-day program.

E. A. Fisher, president of the Western Maryland section of the association, said additional delegates and their wives would arrive later tonight and tomorrow morning, with indications that at least 500 will be registered when the business session get under way.

Fun-Makers Shine.

Tonight's dinner was in charge of the "Rattlesnake Club," the funmaking unit of the State association.

Addresses by Mayor George W. Legge, of Cumberland; Fisher, Scott Meekins, of Dorchester County; Harry Goldberg, of Baltimore, and Abe Martin, of Washington, were on the banquet program.

Proposed action on the State gross receipts tax law will be the paramount topic of discussion at tomorrow's sessions. The grocers' organization has joined other Maryland retailers in retaining attorneys to test the measure in the courts.

Discuss Legislation.

The delegates also plan to discuss the "fresh-egg" law, the new milk regulations and other legislation enacted by the recent General Assembly.

John M. Pohlhaus, president of the association, will preside at the discussions.

Officers will be elected tomorrow afternoon, and the convention will be closed with a banquet tomorrow night. United States Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe have been invited to attend the affair. City and county officials and representatives of national grocers' organizations also have been invited.

Medical Society Scans Relief Need

Prince Georges Survey to Point Program.

The appointment of a committee to study the medical relief needs of Prince Georges County was announced yesterday by the Prince Georges County Medical Society, after a meeting Saturday night at Upper Marlboro. Dr. James I. Boyd, president of the society, said that the investigation is being carried out at the request of the Maryland State Medical Chirugical Faculty.

The survey will determine the need of the county for the near future, and also decide what relief will be available. A delegate was also appointed by the society to meet with the relief committee of the Chirugical Faculty in the near future to discuss State-wide plans for relief under the FERA.

At the meeting Saturday evening a discussion on pneumonia was held, with Dr. A. B. Hooten, Dr. John Maloney and Dr. Boyd as the speakers.

Ceremonies Honor U. S. 'First Mother'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 12.—Five hundred persons gathered at noon today at the tomb of Mary Washington, the mother who gave the Nation its greatest son, George Washington, for impressive Mother's Day exercises.

The motherhood of America was extolled by the Rev. R. V. Lancaster. Flowers were placed upon the granite shaft erected to the country's "First Mother" by Mrs. V. M. Fleming, Miss Frances Williams, Mrs. Marion Willis and Mrs. Winfrey Smith. The monument was completed in 1894 following an appeal made through The Washington Post in 1891, and today it stands as a symbol to American womanhood.

CCC to Restore Eastern Shore Farm Acreage

Thousands of Acres Will Be Drained by Workers at 3 New Camps.

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., May 12. — Thousands of acres of low-lying farm lands on Maryland's Eastern Shore will be restored to agricultural production, it was estimated today, by drainage work carried out as a CCC project in this section of the State.

Three proposed Conservation Corps camps, one near Princess Anne, in Somerset County, and the others at Vienna and Goldsborough, in the upper section of the shore, are expected to operate in about five counties.

Prior to a recent announcement by Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland, that the three camps would be located on the Eastern Shore, L. A. Jones, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, conferred with County Agent C. Z Keller on the county's drainage needs.

Keller presented data prepared for the county welfare board in 1933, showing a total of 132 drainage projects on which 800 men could be given employment. During that year, 324 men were assigned work clearing ditches in the county.

After an inspection trip over a number of tax ditches in the section, the Department of Agriculture agent asserted he would approve the drainage work plans for Somerset and the location of the proposed CCC camp near Princess Anne.

Enrollment for the three Maryland camps will begin about June 15. Work of constructing the physical equipment for them will take about six weeks.

Keller said the drainage work would aid in solving one of the most serious problems confronting shore farmers—that of preventing loss of land and crops as a result of heavy rains and poorly-drained soil.

Contact between the camps and the agriculturists will be maintained through the University of Maryland extension service. Prof. Ray Carpenter, specialist in agricultural engineering for the extension service, and county agents will assist in the work.

1,500 See Exercises at Western College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 12.—Witnessed by a crowd of 1,500 persons, the annual May fete, sponsored by the Women's Student Government of Western Maryland College, was held yesterday.

The program included a processional, headed by Miss Mary Waters Lewis, of Baltimore, chosen as "queen," followed by her court and attendants; the crowning of the queen by Dr. Albert Norman Ward, president of the college, and the presentation of a fantasy, suggested by an old folk story, called "The New Moon."

Maryland Records Crash Toll Increase

Baltimore, May 12 (AP).—Eleven fatal accidents—an increase of ten over the number for the corresponding week last year—were reported by the motor vehicle commissioner's office as the State toll for the week ended Wednesday.

Seven of the accidents occurred in the counties and four in Baltimore.

Irvington, Va., May 12.—Two flower shows are scheduled for Lancaster County in the near future. The Kilmarnock Garden Club will sponsor its annual spring show in the new Dreamland Pavilion at Kilmarnock Thursday. The Irvington Garden Club will hold its spring flower show in the community center room of the school building at Irvington on Tuesday, May 21.

Williamsburg Rites Revive Court Season

Colonial Dress Rules as Price Arrives by Coach.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., May 12.—The spirit of colonial days was evoked here today as leaders of present-day Virginia turned back the clock more than 100 years to celebrate the Virginia court season.

The events began yesterady when Lieut. Gov. James H. Price paid a visit of State to the restored Governor's palace. Garbed in the silken small clothes of the Revolutionary period, the Lieutenant Governor arrived in the State coach to be greeted by Dr. K. J. Hoke, dean of the College of William and Mary; Theodore S. Cox, chairman of the court season committee, and Mayor Channing M. Hall, of Williamsburg; Capt. E. J. Cox, military aid to the Lieutenant Governor, accompanied him. All wore colonial dress.

Celebrations at Williamsburg and Jamestown were held today.

Pilgrimage Planned.

Tomorrow a pilgrimage to the site of the first permanent settlement at Jamestown will be held under the auspices of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, the Colonial National Monument, the College of William and Mary, Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., and the Williamsburg, Jamestown Association.

Memorial services will be held in the old church at 2 p. m. commemorative of the late Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson, president of the Association for the preservation of Virginia antiquities for 30 years, and also of the late Col. Samuel H. Yonge, U. S. engineer, who built the sea wall.

Col. Yonge died March 11 and Mrs. Ellyson on March 23.

Bishop to Officiate.

The Rev. Dr. A. C. Thomson, Bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, will officiate at the services and will be assisted by Dr. W. A R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish Church. A choir from William and Mary College, directed by George Small, will sing.

The celebration of "Jamestown Day," under the sponsorship of the A. P. V. A. has been linked this year with the program of the "Virginia court season."

Driving While Drunk Brings Fine of $100

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 12.—Frank T. Brothers, of Sykesville, was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated at a hearing here yesterday before Police Magistrate Sherman E. Flanagan and was fined $100 and costs.

The charge against Brothers was lodged by State police after his car collided April 10 with a machine driven by C. Ray Barnes, of Winfield, a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Carroll County. Both Barnes and his wife were injured in the crash.

DAVID C. WINEBRENNER 3d.

Friends to Give Winebrenner Dinner May 23

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., May 12.—Announcement was made today by friends and associates of David C. Windbrenner 3d, former Democratic leader of Frederick County, who retired as secretary of state with the passing of the Ritchie regime in January, will be tendered a testimonial dinner May 23 at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, Frederick.

The dinner is being arranged by a committee headed by William B. Bennett, Frederick merchant, and Alfred W. Gaver, county supervisor of assessments. Approximately 300 invitations will be sent out. Prominent State and National officials are expected to be among the list of speakers.

Mr. Winebrenner, who narrowly escaped defeat in the Democratic primaries last September at the hands of the faction headed by Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, as a member of the State central committee for the county, recently resigned, thus giving the Conley faction complete control of party affairs in the county. He made it plain at the time, however, that he had no intention of retiring from politics, and his friends admitted that he was only awaiting opportunity to again wrest the leadership from the heads of Dr. Conley.

The testimonial dinner, according to several Democratic leaders, is the beginning of his campaign to attempt a comeback during the presidential and congressional elections in 1936.

Marker to Be Placed At Washington College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., May 17.—The National Society of the Daughters of the Cincinnati, composed of descendants of George Washington's generals, will place a marker at 2 p. m. Saturday on the Washington College campus in memory of the part Washington played in the founding and early history of the institution. A tree, the gift of the society, was planted last autumn and the marker will be set in front of the tree.

Because Washington College is said to be the oldest in Maryland and because of George Washington's close association with it the local school was chosen for the site of the Maryland tree and marker.

Fire Unit Heads Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Tappahannock, Va., May 12.—Capt. Charles Wachsmuth was made chief of the Tappahannock Volunteer Fire Department at a meeting held here this week. Edward Ware was made assistant chief; C. E. Burgess, captain; William Wallace, first lieutenant, and Bernard Mitchell, second lieutenant.

Over $250,000 Sales Taxes Paid to Date

Flood of Returns for April Burdens Staff at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 12.—With approximately 50 per cent of the returns from the gross receipts tax tabulated, Comptroller William S. Gordy's office announced today the total thus far realized from the tax amounted to $254,326.42.

With stacks of returns received from late mails piled about the office, attaches who have worked overtime since the deadline was passed at midnight May 10, announced 17,217 returns had gone through the machines. It was estimated there are approximately 38,000 taxable retailers in the State.

More piles of returns, yet to be tabulated, awaited the return of harassed workers tomorrow.

Exceeds Aims of Measure.

With the announcement of today's total, observers foresaw that the monthly relief allotment prescribed under the gross receipts tax law passed for relief purposes by the recent Legislature would be exceeded.

Under the provisions of the law, an amount "not in excess" of $3,500,000 may be used annually for relief—representing anticipation of a monthly revenue from the receipts tax of about $291,666.

It was pointed out that, despite contrary reports, only about 275 extensions have been granted to retailers unable to file their returns before the deadline. The majority of these extensions, it was said, expire May 20, and the rest May 25.

Large Firms Win Extensions.

Some of the firms expected to pay the largest amounts under the tax law are included in the number granted extensions, it was pointed out.

The $254,326.42 reported today was "broken down" by the comptroller's office as follows:

Cumberland Host To Business Women

Maryland Meeting Expected to Attract 150.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 12.—An attendance of 150 is expected at the sixth annual two-day convention of the Maryland Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs which will open here next Saturday afternoon. Officers will be chosen at this session.

"Social Security," central theme of the National Federation, will be presented by Mrs. Mary C. Lammert, Frostburg, judge of the Allegany County Juvenile Court, who is State chairman of legislation.

A banquet will be served at the Fort Cumberland Hotel Saturday night at which the principal speaker will be Miss Emily R. Kneubuhuhl, executive secretary of the National Federation. Miss Jane Botsford, convention chairman and newly elected president of the Cumberland club, will be toastmistress.

Salisbury club is expected to send a delegation of ten, Baltimore, 65, and Cumberland, 75.

Scarlet Fever Delays Play.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 12.—Scarlet fever today had caused the postponement of the senior class play of Waynesboro High School School to June 13 and 14. Gordon Thomas, who is taking the lead in the play, is confined to his home with the maladay. The play had been scheduled for May 23 and 24.

14 Washingtonians Seek U. S. Open Berths at Suburban Today

Beach Leads In Practice With 70

Houghton and Peacock Shoot 71's; Also in Favored Class.

34 in All to Compete; Host Pro Feels 143 Will Be Needed.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

SUBURBAN COUNTRY CLUB, Baltimore, May 13.—Al Houghton and Roger Peacock, two of 14 entrants from Washington, and Ralph Beach, host club pro, today established themselves as favorites in the National Open sectional trials which will occupy the attention of 34 golfers from three States and the District here tomorrow.

Kenwood's sharpshooter, Houghton, and Indian Spring's simon-pure ace, Peacock, shot 71's each to set the pace for the District contingent in practice rounds this afternoon.

But it remained for Beach, the one-time Burning Tree pro, to uncork the only par golf of the day—a 70. In so doing Beach overcame a faulty four-hole start, shooting the last 14 holes in five under par. His inauspicous beginning was 6-4-6-5—five over par, and he finished with 36-34.

Shoots Five Birdies.

Both Houghton and Peacock played beautifully. Peacock clicked off five birdies and covered the last nine of the 6,100-yard course in 34, one under par.

Seventy-fours were reported by Benny Loving, Farmington, Va., pro, who is considered a dangerous challenger for one of the four qualifying places allotted this section in the 36-hole trials; Bob Barnett, red-haired Chevy Chase pro, and Darrell Napier, Bob Cruickshank's tall assistant from Richmond, pacesetter in the 1934 Open trials in Richmond.

George Diffenbaugh, pro, and Levi Yoder, amateur, both of Indian Spring; Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam and Mel Shorey, East Potomac, were around in 75, while Fred McLeod, the 1908 National Open champion, of Columbia; Walter Cunningham, Burning Tree, and Al Treder, of Manor, had 76's each.

Glen Spencer Has 73.

Long-driving Glenn Spencer, of Maryland Country Club, took 73 blows and Carroll MacMaster, of Woodholme, 75.

Host Pro Beach, who is familiar with every blade of grass on this course, believes it will take 143 to win a qualifying place, but some of the District golfers think otherwise. The rough at Suburban is terrific—high, thick and tough—they point out.

As Roger Peacock remarked today, "the scores are going to skyrocket if the boys get in that rough. It's so harsh that you have to pour everything into your niblick to come out of some of those spots."

Fairways Are Heavy.

Therefore, it would not be surprising to see 146 qualify.

Those fairways were heavy today. Tomorrow the fairways and greens will be cut, and the pins placed in positions that won't please the field any too well. Rain tomorrow would make matters worse.

The first threesome—Walter Cunningham and two Baltimoreans, Andy Gibson and Ivan Gantz, will fire off at 9 a. m. Houghton plays with Rut Coffey, Winchester lad, and Yoder, of Washington. Peacock, Barnett and Diffenbaugh comprise a prominent threesome.

Mackenzie, Lunn Play.

Pittsburgh, May 13.—Roland Mackenzie and Dick Lunn, the latter an amateur, are included among the more than 100 golfers who will compete at Oakmont tomorrow for eleven qualifying places in the National Open trials. Both Mackenzie, who won the medal in the National Amateur here in 1925, and Lunn, had practice rounds today, but did not report scores.

Cards Pound Phillies To Take Contest, 10-8

Philadelphia, May 12 (AP). — St. Louis defeated the Phillies, 10 to 8, before 7,000 fans today, and divided the four-game series.

Curt Davis, making his first start on the mound since he hurt his arm April 21, was knocked off the slab in less than two innings, the Cards scoring six runs.

25 Open Trials Set; 1,087 Seek Berths

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 12.—A golfing army—1,087 strong—will seek to qualify for the National Open championship in the annual sectional trials on 25 courses tomorrow.

Olin Dutra, who won the title a year ago, will be exempt from the sectional 36-hole medal play test and so will the others who finished among the low 30 and ties in 1934. Likewise automatically qualified for the championship at Oakmont, near Pittsburgh, June 6, 7, 8, is a team of six Japanese professionals and Sid Brews, South African title holder. The exempt list totals 40, leaving 122 places to be filled in tomorrow's play.

New York Trials.

Chicago's field of 139 seeking 14 places includes Tommy Armour, former American and British Open king; Chick Evans, former National Amateur and Open champion; Denny Shute and Jock Hutchinson, both former holders of the British Open crown; Dick Metz and Frank Walsh, well-known pros, and the amateurs, George Dawson and Johnny Lehman.

Two former Open champions, Willie Macfarlane and Johnny Farrell; Craig Wood, big blond from New Jersey who was disqualified in last year's championship for playing the wrong ball, and Joe Ezar, of Texas, are among the field of 130 seeking the 13 berths in the New York district where the pros, Vic Ghezzi, Bill Melhorn and Clarence Clark, and the amateurs, Bobby Jacobson, Rudy Knepper and Gene Homans, also are contenders.

Among the other top-notchers, amateur or professional, who must take their chances with the rest are Walter Hagen, Al Watrous and Chuck Kocsis, in the Detroit district; Henry Picard, Ed Dudley and Max Marston in Philadelphia; Johnny Goodman, former Open title holder, at Omaha; Jimmy Thomson and Ray Mangrum at Pittsburgh; Harry Gandy and Walter Emery at Tulsa; Scotty Campbell and Ted Longworth at Seattle; Joe and Willie Turnesa, pro and amateur, respectively, at Boston; Johnny Fischer at Cincinnati; Harold McSpaden at Kansas City; Willie Goggin at San Francisco, and Fay Coleman at Los Angeles.

Chicago Play Postponed.

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—The Chicago district qualifying round for the National Open golf championship tournament tonight was postponed from tomorrow to a week hence because of the unplayable condition of the Medinah Country Club course, due to last night's record rainfall.

Idle Nats Gain Deadlock for 4th Place

By Shirley L. Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, May 12.—Driven indoors by the rain, which washed out Washington's opening game with the Cleveland Indians today, the Nationals were literally forced to accept a tie for fourth place in the American League's vital statistics. The Red Sox, possessor of fourth place prior to today, lost a 3-2 decision to St. Louis; hence, the deadlock.

Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats took advantage of the bad weather to get another load of pennant-talk off his chest. Reviewing the situation with all the acumen of a leader of flag-winning clubs, Harris arrived at the conclusion that the Washington club could win the 1935 diadem.

Harris said he saw no reason to fear any other team in the league. That there wasn't any club which could make a run-away race of it, and that his Washington athletes had it within their power to go to the front and stay there; that is, if they could pick up one more pitcher of better than ordinary value.

Working on Deal.

"We may get that pitcher within a week," said Harris. "Mr. Griffith is working on a deal and if it goes through, we'll be all set." Harris declined to reveal the identity of the pitcher he seeks, but it is well established that Griffith is dickering for either Buck Newsom or Knott, of the Browns.

"This league isn't so tough this year," said Harris. "The Yankees are far and away the best club we've met, and if they're the best in the league, we can win the pennant. I haven't seen Cleveland yet, but I know what to expect. You have to defer opinion on that team until you see what it does on the road. It's always a poor road team, you know.

"That beating the Deans and the Cardinals gave 'em last fall took something out of the Tigers, it's easy to see. They may never get started. Detroit needs all that it had last year and it's not certain it'll get it."

Harris is sticking to his pitching program that calls for Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart to face the Indians in the first two of the remaining three games of the series here. His strategy in pitching his left-handers is dictated by the presence in the Cleveland line-up of such southpaw sluggers as Averill, Trosky and Campbell. Walter Johnson has available two left-handers to fling at the Nats—Lloyd Brown and Thornton Lee.

Giants Trounce Pirates, 3 to 1; Give 4 Hits

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Roy Parmelee continued to pitch in unbeatable form today, limiting the Pirates to four hits while the Giants captured a 3-to-1 victory in the series final before 19,692 Sunday fans. The league leaders took the series, 3-1.

It was Parmelee's fourth straight victory after he opened the season's pitching campaign by participating in a tie game, and his fourth successive low-hit game. In his four winning efforts the big right hander has allowed only 17 blows in all. He lost his chance for his first shutout today by passing Pinch Hitter Red Lucas with the bases full in the eighth inning.

Browns Beat Boston, 3-2, In Revival

Hornsby Clouts Double to Tie the Score in 7th Inning.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, May 12.—The reviving Browns, taking their second straight game after dropping 11 in a row, batted out a slim 3-to-2 victory here today in ther Sunday series opener with the Boston Red Sox. Light showers kept the crowd to 3,000.

With the Brownie batsmen landing readily on the offerings of Ostermueller, George Blaeholder and Buck Newsom snapped out of an early season slump and between them held the Red Sox to six scattered hits.

Rogers Hornsby dropped his managerial functions for the player's role in the seventh inning. Batting for Blaeholder, the Rajah slashed a long double off the right field wall, scoring Bejma and putting Strange on third. Irving Burns followed with another double to the right field screen bringing Strange in with the winning run, but Hornsby was tagged out at the plate.

Pitcher Gets Four Hits as Cubs Win

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 12.—Pitcher Lon Warneke dominated the Cubs' 4-to-1 victory over the Braves today, giving the Chicago team a clean sweep of the three-game series. Warneke held the Braves to seven hits, made four hits at four times at bat himself and drove in two runs.

He has won four games so far this year, against one defeat.

Ruth was up twice and fanned both times.

Nats, Dodgers, Giants Lead For Week

Washington's 3 Wins and One Loss Top American League in Period.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 12. — Two teams which got the pitching, the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants, and one which made its hits count for runs, the Washington Senators, turned in the standout performances in the major leagues during the past week.

Only these three could show any big balance on the winning side as the fourth week of the campaign wound up today in one of the closest battles for weekly honors so far this year. The Dodgers came through the week unscathed, winning all four games the weather man let them play. The Giants rang up five victories against one defeat while the Senators topped the American League with three triumphs and one loss.

Davis Cup Match Goes to America

China Blanked, 5-0, as U.S. Plans to Meet Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico, D. F., May 12.—The United States made a clean sweep of its Davis Cup tennis series with China today as Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., and Bryan M. Grant, of Atlanta, captured the final two singles matches.

Playing out the full five-match schedule despite the fact that the series had been clinched yesterday, Budge whipped Guy Cheng, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1, and Grant defeated Sin Kie Kho, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3, to make the final score 5—0.

By their victory, the Americans qualify to face Mexico this week in the American zone final.

Annapolis Race May Decide Crew Title

Navy, Penn and Harvard to Clash in Adams Cup Regatta May 25.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The East's sprint rowing title may be decided at Annapolis May 25 when Navy, Penn and Harvard meet in the Adams Cup regatta. Supporters of the Orange of Syracuse, however, may reserve the right to protest the award.

With the short-distance season rapidly nearing an end, Navy, Penn and Syracuse alone of the East's major crews, have escaped defeat. Syracuse, with a victory over Cornell, Harvard and Massachusetts Tech in a quadrangular regatta so far to its credit, has only one more race, against Cornell, at Syracuse, May 25, on its sprint program. The Orange thus is almost certain to be undefeated at short distances.

Beat Yale, Princeton.

Penn, conqueror of two previously undefeated crews, Yale and Princeton, on successive Saturdays, has only the Adams Cup race on its program prior to the 4-mile Poughkeepsie regatta in June. If the Quakers get past Navy and Harvard at Annapolis, there should be few to dispute their claim to the sprint crown.

Navy, at least as impressive as Penn, has the tougher schedule ahead. The Tars first must tackle Yale, Cornell and Princeton in the Carnegie Cup race at Ithaca on Saturday before the Adams Cup regatta two weeks hence.

Won Childs Cup Race.

Penn took full charge of the rowing situation yesterday by outrowing Princeton and Columbia in the Childs Cup race on Lake Carnegie at Princeton. With Lloyd Saton setting the beat, the Quakers took the lead at the outset, covered the mile and three-quarters in 9:18.5 and won by slightly over a length from Princeton with Columbia a badly beaten third.

Of the other races on the program, Princeton took the junior varsity and lightweight tests and Columbia the freshman brush.

This week's program includes not only the Carnegie Cup regatta at Ithaca, but a triangular battle among Columbia, Harvard and Massachusetts Tech on the Harlem.

Carl Fischer Is Bought By Chisox From Tigers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 12.—Carl Fischer, left-handed pitcher, was purchased by the Chicago White Sox today from the Detroit Tigers, J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the Sox, announced.

Fischer, a veteran, was obtained in a straight cash deal, terms of which were not revealed. He won six games and lost four for Detroit last season, but has not worked to a decision this season.

Though Hurt, Canzoneri Won Title

Champion Lays Plans to Start Training for Klick Bout Here.

By Bill McCormick.
A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Tony Canzoneri, the miracle man of the ring who Friday night accomplished the impossible by regaining the lightweight crown which once before graced his Babe Ruthish noggin, achieved his record-breaking feat with nonchalance—and a badly injured shoulder.

The nonchalance was apparent from the ringside as Turn-'Em-Over Tony asserted complete mastery over Lou Ambers, his former sparmate, who had been designated by the New York Boxing Commission to contest the championship resigned by Barney Ross, but none suspected that Canzoneri was laboring with a left shoulder sprained four days before the fight the fight.

Only One Indication.

The champion gave just one indication in the ring that his portside flipper was not in the best of condition. Usually he holds his left high, but against Ambers he let it dangle at his side, bringing it up into the Herkimer Hurricane's face every time Lou tried to take the lead. Most observers interpreted the mane

TEAMS in the Northern Virginia League yesterday buckled down to hard work as their drives toward Post Association honors gained momentum.

Ballston dedicated its new baseball field on the Wilson boulevard with a fitting 10-5 triumph over Herndon; Manassas downed its old rival, Middleburg, 6 to 3, and Earl McPherson registered his fourteenth consecutive victory in league competition as Arlington slugged out a 10-6 victory over Falls Church.

Millwood and Purcellville came through with impressive victories in their initial appearances in the league.

Millwood rallied in the final inning to nose out Aldie, 7 to 6, on Toby Brown's winning single; Purcellville, behind the effective hurling of Bobby Lewis, turned back the strong Fairfax Station nine, 6 to 4, and Paul Jarman's Vienna team hit its winning stride by downing Marshall, 11 to 4, with late batting orgies.

The veteran Calvin Hull emulated the previous Sabbath's performance of Lem Owens by his fine pitching effort for Ballston against Herndon yesterday. Hull scattered six hits and was never in serious danger.

Two Big Innnings.

Manassas concentrated most of its hitting in two innings, the third and fourth, in which it accounted for all its runs.

Shortstop Dansberger was the chief conspirator with Earl McPherson in Arlington's rout over Falls Church.

Mayor A. N. Adams, who tossed out the first ball, and the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps from Loudoun Post No. 34, were among the large throng that saw Pitcher Bobby Lewis and Floyd Dillon and Gilbert Trussell, collaborate with their sparkling play to win for Purcellville over Fairfax Station.

Coach Miles Ends Blacksburg Career

Six Baseball Games Carded by Virginia Tech.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Blacksburg, Va., May 12.—Baseball is king of Virginia Tech's sports realm this week as muffled drums beat the last charge under Sally Miles' athletic banner.

The varsity nine will bid mightily for victory in four games and the freshman nine in two. The boys are determined to "win for Sally," and more than eager that historians shall write of victory in the final chapter on Miles' long regime.

The final thrust opens against the Virginia Cavaliers at home tomorrow at 4 p. m. The battle scene will shift to Salem Wednesday for a return game with Roanoke College. William and Mary will be the foe in a double-header Friday, when the curtain falls on a long schedule.

Chesapeake Routs Heurich Nine, 4-0

Proctor Allows Four Hits; 1,400 See Contest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point Va., May 12.—For the second consecutive time, Chesapeake whitewashed the Heurich Brewers of Washington here today, 4 to 0. Red Proctor, on the mound for Bill Gwathmey's club, was invincible, allowing only four scattered hits. Manager Bill Gwathmey with two singles, and Disney Evans, with a double and a single, led the locals in hitting.

Bobby Baker, in center field, thrilled the 1,400 fans in the stands with several circus catches. Evans and Earp played fine ball in the field for the locals.

Chesapeake plays the Langley Field Post team here Wednesday afternoon. On Saturday it plays host to the Newport News A. C. and on Sunday will journey to Alexandria to play the St. Mary Celtics.

Canzoneri Won Title, Though Injured

ready to start the rigorous conditioning campaign within a week or two.

Klick, who witnessed the encounter Friday night, acknowledged it was a great fight—and refused to be worried about his chances against the wide-mouthed Italian.

"Listen," he told a group of sports writers. "This time I stop Canzoneri. The first time I beat him, but I didn't get the duke. The second time he won from me on a technical knockout which never should have been a knockout. In Washington, I will, no doubt, knock him out."

Canzoneri's opponent for the Washington bout is 25 and has some 200 fights including amateur bouts, is married, the father of two children and fairly exudes confidence. It has been rumored that bad blood exists between Canzoneri and Klick because of fouls allegedly committed by Tony in a bout which ended in a technical knockout.

Halted in Ninth.

"Let's not say anything about the fouls," Klick said today. "Perhaps Tony did do things to me he shouldn't have done in that fight, but let's forget it. If he did me wrong I'll get even in Washington. I would like to say, however, that the fight should never have been stopped. For some reason the referee stopped it in the ninth round, although my closed eye which was his excuse for calling a halt was as bad in the fourth as it was in the ninth."

Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who will stage the bout between Klick and Canzoneri, received the assurance of all concerned that the Washington fight would go through exactly as scheduled even though many others are putting in bids for the contest following Tony's startling performance Friday night. Contracts for the Washington bout were signed some three weeks ago. Both fighters will come to Washington a week or two before the bout to complete their training on the scene of action.

Front Royal Tops Celtic Nine, 5 to 0

Boerner Grants Six Blows and Titcomb Five.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., May 12.—The Front Royal All-Stars shutout the St. Marys Celtics of Alexandria, here this afternoon, 5 to 0. Larry Boerner held the visitors to six scattered hits, two of which came in the ninth when he eased up behind the five-run lead.

Titcomb, Celtic southpaw, also pitched well, holding the Stars to five hits, but the Stars managed to bunch their hits with passes to run up an early lead. The locals big inning was the third when they tallied three times on two walks, an error by Benson and Fitzgerald's double.

The All Stars desire to book games on their home grounds on May 25 and 26.

Lansburgh's, Kann's Add To Lead

Defeat Palais Royal and Hecht in Department Store League.

Yesterday's Results.
Lansburgh's, 5; Palais Royal, 3.
Kann's, 10; Hecht's, 9.

LANSBURGH'S and Kann's Sons kept up their winning ways yesterday to share the commanding position for Post Association honors in the Department Store League.

Lansburgh's made the most of its four hits to nose out Palais Royal, 6 to 5, while the Kannsmen came through with stirring rallies in the final innings to eke out a 10-9 victory over the Hecht nine.

Charlie Fillah was the opportunist in Lansburgh's triumph. His double in the hectic fourth inning with the bases loaded sealed the fate of the Royalmen. Behind this advantage Charles Vance insured a victory by hurling shut-out ball the rest of the game. The teams were forced to end play in the sixth because of the expiration of the 2-hour time limit.

Five Runs in Eighth.

Kann's five-run spree in the eighth, climaxed by Henry's home run for the decisive score, overcoming a comfortable advantage the Hecht hitters had accumulated behind some fine pitching by Paul Messink. It was a tough break for Messink, who saw this early lead frittered away by loose play by his teammates. Bill Mitchell, who supplanted Messink in the eighth, was the victim of Kann's late onslaught. Cuozza, of Kann's, and Ruelling and Carroll, of Palais Royal, shared with Henry in the batting honors of the day.

Massanutten Beats Shepherd Teachers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., May 12. Allowing only three singles, Hollis, on the mound for Massanutten Military Academy, held the Shepherd State Teachers baseball team scoreless here, winning 4-0.

Shepherd's only threat came in the seventh inning when the Rams loaded the bases with two walks and a single, but Hollis kept the situation well in hand when he fanned the next two batters.

Post Golf Play Under Way Today

CONGRESSIONAL COUNTRY CLUB's course, long the bugaboo of women golfers, will attempt to repulse a field of 78 feminine stars and near stars in the qualifying round of The Washington Post match play handicap tournament this morning.

With 18 holes scheduled, only 32 from this list will survive the day's firing. One of these is an automatic qualifier—Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of the host club, who won The Post trophy last season at Chevy Chase.

These 32 qualifiers — and they will be determined on a low net basis—will compete in the first round of match play tomorrow. The final will be played Friday.

18 Handicap Limit.

Eighteen is the handicap limit, but this limit holds no terror for some of the women with 24 handicaps. The District Women's Golf Association is permitting those with higher club ratings to enter and accept the 18 limit, and the women are availing themselves of the opportunity.

Each of the ten District clubs is well represented, and there are a few unattached players, 100-pound Betty Keeler, District women's municipal champion, in particular, who may have something to say about winning the tournament.

Low Gross Choices.

Among those favored for the low gross award are Mrs. Jack Scott, Congressional champion, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, who play together at 9:40; Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, 1933 Post champion; Miss Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, who tee off at 9:45.

The women will tee off from the first and second tees starting at 8:30. Caddies will be furnished by Congressional.

Sweeney Awarded Cumberland Fight

Pittsburgh Club Unbeaten on Amateur Card.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 12.—Rallying in the last two rounds, after being clearly outpointed in the opening stanza, Lao Sweeney, Allegheny Mountain lightweight champion who recently advanced to the final in the National A. A. U. tournament in St. Louis before being eliminated, gained a decision over Bill Niland, of this city, South Atlantic A. A. U. 135-pound title holder, in the intercity card of the Casey Athletic Association before a large crowd at SS. Peter and Paul arena. Pittsburgh Boys Club boxers won all their bouts.

The results:

George Holtz, 128, Mount Savage, won decision over Ralph Parker, 127, Cumberland.

Jimmy Ringler, 120, Mount Savage, won on technical knockout over Carl Wissman, 122, Cumberland Y. M. C. A., in 35 seconds of second round when latter quit.

Leo Sweeney, 135, Pittsburgh Boys Club, won decision over Bill Niland, 136, Cumberland.

Chevy Chase's Golf Team Winner

LOSING only two matches out of six, Chevy Chase walloped Kenwood, 12½ to 5½, yesterday at the former's course to win the District section of the Maryland State amateur team championship.

Kenwood flashed a powerful No. 1 team in Russ Hollebaugh, Kenwood champion, and Maury Fitzgerald, former Middle-Atlantic semifinalist. They rapped out a best ball of 68 to take 2½ points from Johnny Brawner and Frank P. Reeside in the feature match of the day.

Hollebaugh contributed a 73, four over par, going out in 35. He went three over par for the next three holes, and played the last six in even par. Fitzgerald had a 75. A five on the seventeenth prevented the Kenwood pair from finishing with a 67. Brawner and Reeside had a best ball of 70.

Mason, Lewis Win.

W. Beverly Mason, jr., and Reeve Lewis, jr., long considered a tough combination, shot a best ball of 66 to capture three points from Charlie Cole and Bernard Dennell, of Kenwood.

N. Noma, of the Japanese Embassy, and Henry Niemeyer teamed successfully to win three from R. P. Dunn and T. M. Foley.

Seventy-year-old Admiral C. B. McVay, one of the best senior golfers at Chevy Chase, and Palmer Reeside, scored well to take three from Lee Perley and Dr. Parks.

Chevy Chase's victory earned the team the right to meet the winner of the Baltimore district for the Maryland championship a week from Sunday.

Results:

Chevy Chase (12½) vs. Kenwood (5½).
Johnny Brawner and Frank P. Reeside, ½; Maury Fitzgerald and Russ Hollebaugh, 2½.
W. B. Mason, jr., and Reeve Lewis, jr., 3; Charlie Cole and Bernard Dennell, 0.
Robert Stead, jr., and Walter Chappell, 3; M. Olsen and Noah Pomeroy, 0.
A. C. Miles and Corcoran Thom, jr., 3; J. E. Veil and M. Henry, 0.
R. P. Dunn and T. M. Foley, 0; Henry Niemeyer and N. Noma, 3.

Martinsburg Scores 110 Points in Track

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 12.—A new record in scoring for sectional high school track and field meets was set here Saturday afternoon when Martinsburg High, minus the services of one of its chief scoring threats, swamped three neighboring schools in the annual event.

Martinsburg piled up the unprecedented total of 110½ points and the best the second place team, Berkeley Spring could do was to muster 44½. Hedgesville gathered 33 points and Bunker Hill was only a step behind with 32.

Wales Cup to Risdon; Little, Topping Quit

Deal, England, May 12 (U.P.).—P. W. L. Risdon, young English amateur and a Walker Cup possibility, today won the Prince of Wales Golf Cup by scoring 76-78—154 in the 36-hole, one-day test. Lawson Little, of San Francisco, British and United States champion, withdrew his entry, as did Dan Topping, of Greenwich, Conn.

200 to Vie in Chevy Chase Tourney

Ace Golfers Tee Off in Invitation Tomorrow; Peacock Choice.

A FIELD of close to 200 golfers, including the best amateur players in the District, will compete in the historic Chevy Chase invitation tournament which will open tomorrow morning with an 18-hole qualifying round. Half of the field will tee off tomorrow, and the remainder Wednesday.

First and second round matches are scheduled Thursday, and the semifinals and finals Friday.

Pairings and starting times released last night show that Roger Peacock, favorite and recent winner of the Woodmont invitation, will tee off with Johnny Brawner, Chevy Chase star, at 1:50 p. m. Wednesday, while Harry Pitt, of Manor, former winner, is paired with W. Beverly Mason, jr., finalist last season.

Visitors Also to Play.

A number of Baltimore and Virginia golfers also will play in the tournament.

Wilmer Allison, Davis Cup tennis captain, is among the entrants. The Texan is paired with A. McCook Dunlop at 10:30 Wednesday.

Omaha's Victory Gives Belair Stud Top Money in Maryland

Vanderbilt's Entries Are Second

Mutuel Play Increased; Workman's 25 Wins Led Jockeys.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 12.—By virtue of Omaha's smashing victory in the Preakness, William Woodward's Belair Stud today was leading money-winner of the Maryland spring racing season.

Although the Woodward Stable won but a single race—the Preakness—the $25,325 the victory brought with it topped the season's showing of the A. G. Vanderbilt string, next best with $20,750.

Jealously guarded by his trainers, Omaha was routed out of his stable at 5 a. m. today for the journey to Aqueduct, where he will rest until his next appearance, probably at Belmont Park, June 8.

Two Others Won Three.

When and if he starts in the Belmont stakes, he will be shooting at a mark held by only two other horses—that of winning the derby, the Preakness, and the Belmont. Gallant Fox, Omaha's sire, was one of the two which accomplished the feat. The other was Sir Baron.

With the major tracks shut down until fall, the Hagerstown 10-day meeting will open Tuesday, May 21. Thereafter, State racing ends until mid-August when Cumberland, Marlboro, and Timonium operate in that order.

A glance at the records for the spring season puts the Vanderbilt entries, with 21 wins in 35 days of racing, second among the money-winners. Eight of the Vanderbilt victories were registered during the Pimlico meeting.

Hector's String Third.

H. H. Hector's string brought down the third-best cash—$13,000—also won in a single appearance on a State track. Fourth was Shandon Farms, with $8,980.

The crown for the trainers went to John H. Stotler, of Baltimore, handler of the Vanderbilt horses. Stotler is figured to have set some sort of track record by scoring his 21 victories in 35 days of racing. Harry Baker, trainer for E. K. Bryson, was next in line with nine winners.

Workman on Top.

Raymond (Sonny) Workman, of Washington, drew down jockey honors for the season with 25 wins. He scored 12 at Pimlico, 11 at Havre de Grace, and 2 at Bowie—to set a mark not even approached by a rival rider.

Silvio Coucci, of New York, set the mark for the most winners at one meeting. He was up on 15 firsts at Bowie.

The daily mutuel play at Pimlico during the meeting just closed averaged $336,597, as compared with $335,693 a year ago. Attendance was higher than that of last year.

Shawnee A. C. Triumphs.

Shawnee A. C. defeated Takoma Park A. C. yesterday, 5 to 4, in 13 innings. Clinton struck out 18 for the winners.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Jamaica, May 12.

Bennings, Inc., had a big argument last night as to where we would operate this week. We were just warming up to the battle when the boss came in and made up our minds. He said Jamaica for Monday and Tuesday and then go over to Rockingham for the opening of the New Hampshire track on Wednesday. Then I gave a few orders. I sent Trainer Joe to Hagerstown to get a line on the half-milers and I sent Daily Double Dan to Charles Town to get a line on the three-quarter-milers. Clocker Mike and I will take care of the milers. We expect to give the bookies a battle on the New York front. Looks like small fields and small odds, but a winner is a winner just as a dinner is a dinner. If you don't believe that ask Clocker Mike. He went for enough cash on Pimlico to feed an army of wrestlers. I finally broke my jinx on big races but it took a horse like Omaha to do it. I heard some talk at the track yesterday about this year's 3-year-olds being a sorry lot and that Omaha was an ordinary horse that was fortunate enough to pop up in mediocre company. The fact is that Omaha was brought to the Derby very slowly and he is getting better every day. There is no doubt in my mind but what he would have clipped the track mark in the Preakness had Saunders been forced to open him wide in the stretch. Omaha has soundness, something only a few Derby and Preakness winners could boast, and I believe we shall see him parade through the opposition right up to the time the snow flies. And don't be surprised if he places his name high on the money-won list before the year ends. BILL.

First race—Masked Gal turned in a nice effort last out in better company than she faces tomorrow. I expect about 8 to 5, which will be enough. Blind Talk has a fair race and a good trial to recommend him a contender here. Golden Duchess has worked well.

Second race—Tempestuous ran well here last week, and, with only 102 pounds to carry, I see no reason for mistakes. Seawick is speedy on occasions and will be the one to beat if bearing down. John Werring for the show.

Third race—Robinson Crusoe has shown a liking for the New York tracks. Comes up to this race to meet cheap opposition and after showing good form in the morning. Our Trouble is better than that poor race at Churchill Downs. Guiding Light to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Golden Lyre, winner of two straight races, is slated to make it three in a row here. Tinkling Brook propped at the start last out and will be the one to beat if away alertly tomorrow. Apple Betty for the show end.

Fifth race—Carsono's recent sprints have indicated that this one will take a purse at the longer route he is assigned tomorrow. Providing Horn hustles through the stretch, I expect this one to score. Diseur fits better in this field than he did in the last. Broadcaster to take care of the minor award.

Sixth race—Balios should take the day's final without undue trouble if his effort is on the level. His last was encouraging. Big Show and Free to complete the money bracket.

"C" Club Meet Heads Prep Program

Thirty-five Events Carded for Week; Baseball Still in Tangle.

THE high and prep school spring sports season apparently has seen its best days in point of number of contests but with 35 slated for this week, it still appears anything but decrepit. In fact, the quality of the events this week, including the Central "C" Club track meet, Saturday, easily offsets the substantial numerical decrease.

While the "C" Club meet occupies the big spot on the program, with Tech defending its championship against the combined assaults of Episcopal, Staunton Military, Massanutten, John Marshall of Richmond and a couple of dozen other schools, it must share the headlines with some other good actors.

For instance, the crucial Central-Eastern interhigh ball game on Wednesday in addition to shedding some light on the big series mystery which has had all five teams at one time or another the favorite, also renews the well-known Central-Eastern rivalry which is anything but docile.

The Episcopal-St. Alban's tennis encounter tomorrow, brings together the two best prep school teams in the section in a renewal of their old feud while the Eastern-Maryland Freshmen ball game on Thursday and the Roosevelt-Tech game on Friday furnish a proper build-up for the "C" Club meet on Saturday. The Roosevelt-Tech game should help unravel the baseball mix-up.

In tennis, the Private High individual championships, on Friday are a high light, with the Maryland State schoolboy championships on Saturday and Sunday, an even bigger event in the golf world. Most of the outstanding young golfers of the section are planning to compete.

Prep Leagues Topped by Champs

All Five Loops Defended by Teams Which Won Titles Last Year.

A HASTY glance at the five schoolboy leagues reveals that the defending champions in all of them are sitting atop their respective circuits, with two of them as far out in front of the field as Omaha—the horse, sir, not Nebraska.

While Eastern rests in wobbly insecurity on top rung of the interhigh baseball roost and Central finds itself tied for the lead of the interhigh tennis series with Western, Georgetown Prep in the Private High Golf League has another championship all but stored away and St. Alban's likewise in the Private High Tennis League.

Mathematically it is possible for both the Prep and the Albanites to lose their remaining matches and be tied for the titles but it is distinctly improbable. Neither has lost a match and one more victory would clinch the title for each school. The championships are more or less heirlooms to both of them but this season has seen them pressed a trifle more closely, than in the past, both by St. John's High teams.

First Red Opposition.

The Johnnies have won five of their seven golf matches and two of their three tennis engagements to give the Prep and Alban's the first real opposition they have had in years.

The interhigh golf race is another matter, notwithstanding the fact that Western's champions are back in their old place at the top, unbeaten in three matches. Western barely topped a strong Roosevelt team, 5 to 4, while Central has won its last three matches impressively after falling in the opener before Roosevelt. Roosevelt has a chance of helping to bring about the downfall of the Westerners in their forthcoming encounter—but the all-important match will be the Central-Western engagement when the title and the Charles G. Dawes Trophy will be virtually hanging on every stroke.

AUCTION SALES

NOTICE OF SALE OF PROPERTIES OF WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE AND ANNAPOLIS ELECTRIC RAILROAD COMPANY

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, dated May 8, 1935, and passed in a cause therein pending entitled R. E. Duvall Company, Incorporated, versus Washington Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company, the undersigned Special Master will offer for sale at public auction on Friday, June 14, 1935, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Courthouse door at Annapolis, Maryland, the properties constituting the railroad system of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company. That such sale of said properties will be offered in separate parcels and in the following order:

FIRST—That single track portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system known as the Annapolis Short Line and extending from and including Bladen Street Station in the City of Annapolis, Maryland, to Shipley, Anne Arundel County, Maryland, a distance of approximately eighteen and one-half miles; and in connection therewith all the right, title and interest of the Terminal Real Estate Company of Baltimore City and the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company in the real estate constituting the former right-of-way of the Baltimore and Annapolis Short Line Railroad company from Shipley to and in Baltimore City.

This parcel will be offered subject to the lien, operation and effect of—

(a) Mortgage to the Fidelity Trust Company, Trustee, of Baltimore City and the bonds and coupons secured thereby in an aggregate amount of $1,225,000 with interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from February 1, 1935, and

(b) Mortgage to the Maryland Trust Company, Trustee, of Baltimore City and the bonds and coupons secured thereby, aggregating the sum of $765,741.48, together with interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from January 1, 1935.

SECOND—That double track portion of the main line of the defendant Railroad Company's system extending north from Shipley, Anne Arundel County, Maryland, to the property line of the terminal of said Railroad Company in the City of Baltimore; a distance of approximately seven miles.

THIRD—That single track portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system extending from the City of Annapolis, Maryland, at the foot of King George Street, through Anne Arundel County and a point known as Naval Academy Junction and through a point on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad known as Odenton to a point on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company known as Fort George G. Meade Junction, a distance of approximately twenty-one miles, including the right to cross the said Railroad Company's main line system at Naval Academy Junction and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Odenton.

FOURTH—That double track portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system known as its main line, extending from the property line of the terminal of said Railroad Company in the City of Baltimore, through the City of Baltimore, Baltimore County, Anne Arundel County and Prince Georges County to the point of intersection of said line with the boundary line of the District of Columbia at Seat Pleasant, Prince Georges County (District of Columbia line and intersection with the Chesapeake Beach Railway), a distance of approximately thirty-three miles, together with the rights of the defendant Railroad Company—

(a) Under an operating contract with the Capital Transit Company, by the terms of which cars of the said Railroad Company are operated from the boundary line of the District of Columbia to the terminals of said Railroad Company in the City of Washington, a distance of approximately seven miles, said operation being over the tracks of the said Capital Transit Company; and

FIFTH—That double track portion of the said defendant Railroad Company's system extending from the property line of the terminal of said Company in the City of Baltimore, through said City, Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties, to a point known as Naval Academy Junction, a distance of approximately fifteen and one-quarter miles, and that portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system described in Parcel 3rd hereof;

SIXTH—That double track portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system extending from the boundary line of the terminal of the Railroad Company in the City of Washington to Naval Academy Junction, a distance of approximately twenty-five miles (the right to have its cars operated from the terminal of the Railroad Company in Washington to the District boundary line being under contract as described in Parcel 4th hereof), together with that portion of the said Railroad Company's system described in Parcel 3rd hereof;

SEVENTH—All of the Railroad Company's system with the exception of that portion described in Parcel 1;

EIGHTH—All property, real and personal, of the Railroad Company including its entire railroad system and all equipment and personal property, rights and franchises, with the exception of the cash, cash items, accounts receivable, bills and notes receivable in the hands of George Weems Williams, Receiver; subject, however, as to said Annapolis Short Line, to the lien and operation of—

(a) Mortgage to the Fidelity Trust Company, Trustee, of Baltimore City, and the bonds and coupons secured thereby in an aggregate amount of $1,225,000, with interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from February 1, 1935, and

(b) Mortgage to Maryland Trust Company, Trustee, of Baltimore City, and the bonds and coupons secured thereby, aggregating the sum of $765,741.48, together with interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from January 1, 1935.

Each of the foregoing parcels if purchased as operating units will include the switches, intersections and appurtenances of each such unit and the movable and personal property, including cars, rolling stock, equipment, supplies and office equipment and other property applicable to such unit, the character and amount of which will be determined by George Weems Williams, Receiver. Any bidder for each such unit whose bid is provisionally accepted, if he disagree with said determination, may appeal to the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland for final determination.

There shall also be included with each such unit, if purchased as an operating unit, the rights, contracts and privileges of the Railroad Company applicable to such unit, subject to the contracts and obligations of George Weems Williams in respect to such unit as of the date of confirmation of the sale thereof.

NINTH—All right, title and interest of the said Railroad Company in and to the real estate and appurtenances of said Railroad Company known as its terminal property situated in Baltimore City, Maryland, and consisting of approximately 78,733 square feet, located at the Park View Christian Church, on Park road east of Georgia avenue northwest, on Tuesday, May 14, at 10 a. m. W., consisting of approximately 32,827 square feet, together with the buildings and improvements located thereon.

Also, all right, title and interest of the Railroad Company in and to the real estate and appurtenances located at the intersection of Benning Road and Bladensburg Road (15th & H Streets, N. E.), Washington, D. C., consisting of approximately 141,309 square feet, together with the buildings and improvements located thereon.

These two lots will be offered separately.

TWELFTH—All right, title and interest of the said Railroad Company in and to the real estate and appurtenances in the City of Annapolis, known as the Annapolis Terminal of the Railroad Company, situated at the intersection of West and Calvert Streets, consisting of approximately 32,850 square feet.

(b) All right, title and interest of the Maryland Development and Realty Company in and to the real estate and appurtenances in the City of Annapolis situated at the intersection of College Avenue and Bladen Street, consisting of approximately 11,827 square feet.

These two lots will be offered separately.

12th—The issued and outstanding capital stock of the Terminal Real Estate Company of Baltimore City, consisting of ten shares of the par value of $100 each. Such parcel includes all of the outstanding capital stock of Maryland Development and Realty Company of Anne Arundel County, consisting of four hundred shares of the par value of $50 each. The properties of said two companies include parcels of land located in the City of Baltimore, Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties and the City of Annapolis, Maryland, which are more particularly shown upon plats thereof which may be inspected at the main business office of the Railroad Company. Prior to delivery of such stock of the Terminal Real Estate Company of Baltimore City there will be conveyed and assigned by said Company and excepted from the sale:—

(a) Certain deed and note upon property located in the City of Washington, D. C., at Third and H Streets, N. E., and any payments made thereon;

(b) Parcels of real estate constituting part of the operating right-of-way of the Railroad Company;

(c) The former right-of-way of the Baltimore and Annapolis Short Line Railroad Company extending from Shipley, Anne Arundel County, to and in the City of Baltimore, approximately paralleling the main right-of-way of the Railroad Company.

(d) All right, title and interest of the Maryland Development and Realty Company of Anne Arundel County in and to the real estate and appurtenances in the City of Annapolis located at the northwest corner of College Avenue and Bladen Street.

13th—All of the movable equipment and Railroad property of the Railroad Company, including rails, ties, overhead equipment, rolling stock, supplies, block signal system, substation equipment, carhouse equipment, bridges, shop equipment, busses and all personal property of like character. A more particular description of the kind, character and amount of such property and the nature thereof may be obtained from schedules thereof at the main business office of the Railroad Company, Howard and Lombard Streets, Baltimore, Maryland. Such schedules include the number, kind, character and description of such rolling stock and the liens and conditions under which certain thereof are held and owned by the Railroad Company. There will also be separately offered all right, title and interest of the Railroad Company in and to ten 2-section articulated motor trains with trucks, electrical and air brake equipment held under lease from the J. G. Brill Company dated July 26, 1926, in respect of which there is due the sum of $210,900 with interest thereon; also all right, title and interest of the Railroad Company in and to nine combination passenger and smoking trail cars held under agreement of conditional sale dated May 4, 1929, from the J. G. Brill Company, assigned to Baltimore Corporation of Maryland, upon which there is due the sum of $166,725, with interest;

The Railroad Company in addition to the cars subject to the liens above referred to owns and there will be offered for sale real estate owned by the Railroad Company with the exception of the real estate described in parcels Nos. 9, 10 and 11.

Such further description will be offered in separate units consisting of the roadbeds constituting the main line of the Railroad Company from Seat Pleasant, Prince Georges County, to the property line of the terminal in the City of Baltimore and the roadbed under the line in and from the City of Annapolis to and including Fort George G. Meade Junction.

No statements, schedules or inventories filed by the Receiver or by the Special Master in connection with the property sold shall in any wise constitute any representation or warranty, nor shall such statements, schedules or inventories constitute any ground for release from any bid because of any representation in such statements, schedules or inventories or any omission or omissions therefrom, nor shall anything contained in such statements, schedules or inventories be binding upon any purchaser at said sale.

The Special Master will provisionally accept the bid of the highest qualified bidder for each of the separate parcels offered and the bid of the highest qualified bidder for all of the property as an entirety, and will then forthwith report to the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland all such bids so provisionally accepted. The Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids made and provisionally accepted by the Special Master together with the right to resell any property sold, on failure of the purchaser or purchasers or their successors or assigns to pay the balance of the purchase price within twenty days after confirmation of such sale, unless for good cause shown the Court shall allow further time.

No bids shall be received unless the same be accompanied by cash or properly certified check payable to the order of Louis J. Burger, Special Master, and drawn on a member bank or trust company of the Federal Reserve System in the amount of $10,000 if such bid be made on any of the separate parcels with the exception of parcels 1st and the separate items in parcel 11th; in respect to each of which such check shall be in the amount of $1,000, and except parcel 8th, in respect of which the amount of such check shall be $100,000, in lieu of such cash or certified check, the bidder may deposit with the Special Master first mortgage five per cent bonds of the Railroad Company secured by the mortgage to the Cleveland Trust Company, Trustee, together with all unmatured interest coupons. Bonds so presented shall be in the face amount, exclusive of interest, equal to twice the amount of the cash or certified check in place of which they are tendered. All deposits received by the Special Master except those deposited by the bidder whose bid is provisionally accepted by the Special Master, shall be returned by him at the conclusion of the sale to the bidder or bidders from whom they have been received. In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the Special Master or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with any order of the Court relating to the terms of the sale, then all deposits, moneys or checks deposited by said bidder or purchaser will be forfeited and will be applied toward the payment of the expenses of any sale and of such other purposes as the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland may direct. If any sale for which a deposit is made and for which a bid is accepted shall not be confirmed by the Court for any other cause than for failure on the part of the bidder to comply with the terms of his bid, such deposit will be returned to the bidder. The said Court reserves full power, authority and discretion to reject any bid which in its judgment is inadequate or is subject to just objection.

In addition to the deposit made upon any bid at the time of the said sale, as required as a part of the purchase price there shall also be paid in cash by the purchaser upon the confirmation of such sale and from time to time thereafter, such further portions of the purchase price of the property sold as the Court may direct. The balance of the purchase price not required to be paid in cash may be paid in cash or purchaser may elect to make good the remainder in whole or in part by delivering to the Special Master first mortgage five per cent bonds of the Railroad Company secured by mortgage to the Cleveland Trust Company, Trustee, or coupons for unpaid interest on such bonds, or both, so far as they will go in paying such remainder, which bonds and coupons unless in negotiable form and payable to bearer shall be duly endorsed and assigned in blank. Such bonds and coupons whether delivered to the Special Master at the time of sale or subsequently will be received at such price or value as will be equivalent to the sum which will be payable on such bonds and coupons out of the net proceeds of the sale if such sale were made for money and the whole amount of the purchase price were paid in cash. If there shall be realized in the sale applied on the purchase price the full amount due on said bonds and coupons then said bonds and coupons or such of them as are so paid in full will be cancelled and retained by the Special Master subject to the order of said Court, but if there shall not be realized on the sale and applied on the purchase price the full amount of the said bonds and coupons, the Special Master will stamp or write on each bond or coupon the amount which is so applied thereon and shall return such bonds and coupons to the person or persons from whom the same are received, but no purchaser will be personally, either individually, severally or jointly liable for the amount of any deficiency upon said bonds and coupons or any of them. The Special Master may receive the certificate of any bank or trust company to deliver as depositary under any bondholders' committee or other committee on reorganization in lieu of an actual deposit of such bonds or coupons. Such certificate shall set forth the number and amount of bonds deposited and the coupons attached thereto, and must contain an agreement on the part of such bank or trust company to deliver the same to the Special Master upon his demand.

Any purchaser whose bid has been accepted and confirmed by said Court may assign the right to the property purchased, and a deed therefor will be made to such assignee upon completion of the purchase by such purchaser or assignee. Subject to the decision of said Court, such purchaser may assign separate parcels purchased to separate assignees. No purchaser shall be held personally liable under the decree under which this sale is being made for any costs, expenses, compensation, disbursements, allowances, indebtedness, obligations, charges or liabilities in respect to the property purchased, except as in said Decree expressly stated, or provided the method therein provided for enforcing the liability of such purchaser being exclusive of all other remedies.

Upon confirmation of the sale and payment of the purchase price in accordance with the terms of the bid accepted by said Court, and upon compliance with all the terms of sale or upon making such provision for the payment of the purchase price as said Court shall approve, the Special Master shall make, execute and deliver to the purchaser in form to be approved by said Court and at such time or times as said Court shall direct, proper instruments of conveyance, transfer, assignment, transfer and sale of the property sold, and upon delivery of such instrument or instruments the grantee therein named shall be let into the possession of the property sold, conveyed and transferred. Subject to the conditions in said instruments of conveyance or the decree of sale, the purchaser shall upon delivery of such instrument or instruments of conveyance by the Special Master be invested with the title to and shall hold and enjoy such property sold to such purchaser, and all rights, privileges and immunities pertaining thereto as fully as the Railroad Company or its predecessor in title or the Receiver now hold or enjoy in the same, or held or enjoyed or were entitled to hold or enjoy at the time of the execution and delivery of said mortgage to the Cleveland Trust Company, or at any time thereafter free and clear from all rights, titles, claims, benefits and equities of redemption of the parties to the proceeding or any of them, or arising through or under any of such parties.

The District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland reserves the exclusive power and jurisdiction to deliver to the purchaser or purchasers title to and possession of the property sold in the District of Maryland and to determine any and all controversies as to the character, extent and validity of the possession and title of such purchaser or purchasers acquired under the decree of sale. In the event that the properties or any of them offered for sale shall not be sold or in the event any such sale shall not be confirmed the said Court retains full jurisdiction to order further sales or disposition of the property offered in the manner set forth by said decree or in such manner as may be determined by said Court.

All properties or parcels will be offered subject to a pro rata adjustment of all taxes, and ground rent and like charges to the date of the sale.

The District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland retains full jurisdiction over the property of the Railroad Company or any part thereof to consider and adjudicate matters of condemnation and all other questions involved in the petitions now pending before said Court, namely: petition of Albert G. Towers, Receiver, and Consolidated Gas Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore, which an order nisi was passed on July 7, 1933; and a petition of the Consolidated Gas Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore, on which an order nisi was passed April 11, 1935.

The right is reserved to withdraw from the sale any separate parcel by announcement at the time and place of sale. Reference is made to the decree herein referred to for a more particular description of the terms and conditions of said sale.

Full details and schedules of the properties including real estate offered for sale and an opportunity to inspect the same will be furnished upon application to the undersigned Special Master at 215 North Charles street or to the main business office of the Railroad Company at Howard and Lombard streets, Baltimore, Md.

LOUIS J. BURGER, Special Master.

JOE PALOOKA

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Reaction of a Husband After Another Amelia Earhart Flight.

My wife gads a lot;
In fact, she does not Think home a great spot—
But I always know
She isn't in Mexico.

* * * *

She certainly gets around
And covers a lotta ground,
Wherever she's bound—
But I never had to say,
"Maybe she's at Trepassy Bay."

* * * *

I'm very often on my own,
All, all alone,
By the telephone—
But I know my gal
Ain't in Oakland, Cal.

* * * *

A late dinner to me
Is no novelty;
They come frequently—
But I never have to fear
She's in a tree, the dear!

* * * *

My wife is often away,
And I often pray
That home she'll stay—
But I never am frantic,
Fearing she's over the Atlantic!

* * * *

She thinks "Home, Sweet Home," tripe—
You know the type—
But I never have to say,
"She's out Honolulu way!"

* * * *

Often I find just a note
That she wrote,
Which I won't quote—
But it never reads: "Dearie, I'm between Harbor Grace and Erie."

* * * *

She keeps me in suspense,
The strain is intense,
And it doesn't make much sense—
But I never have a terrible dream
That she can't find the radio beam!

* * * *

In brief, my wife is always out,
Gadding about,
But I never have to shout:
"Come on down, Molly!
You've made a new record, by golly!"

Moderation Urged.

"Mexico is four times as civilized as Newark."—George Palmer Putnam, in expressing his indignation at the mobbing of his wife after her Mexico flight. Now, George, be careful how you insult Mexico!

Max Baer was injured by a shot from a blank cartridge the other day. Of course it may have been a regular bullet that became intimidated.

The former Presidential yacht Mayflower is for sale for $200,000. Couldn't the Republicans use it as a keepsake?

Streamline Train.

The boy stood on the railroad track—
There was no train in sight;
Toot! Toot!
Good night!

The twelve Hauptmann jurors are writing a joint book. We knew this would be a big year in literature.

THAT'S IT - SIT THERE! WHY DON'T YOU GO OVER TO BIM'S - SEE IF HE NEEDS A NEW DOCTOR - MAYBE YOU CAN TAKE CARE OF SOME OF HIS AFFAIRS - HE MIGHT EVEN BE THINKING ABOUT HIS WILL - DO SOMETHING - CAN'T YOU?
I TOLD YOU I WILL - BUT CAN'T YOU QUIT NAGGING - CRITICIZING? DON'T FORGET IT'S EASY ENOUGH TO FIND FAULTS - THE TOUGH THING IS TO KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH THEM WHEN YOU'VE FOUND 'EM -
ALL RIGHT - BUT I WOULDN'T HAVE TO FIND FAULT IF YOU WEREN'T ALWAYS CHANGING YOUR MIND THE WAY YOU DO -
AND WHY SHOULDN'T I? A MAN'S MIND IS LIKE THE WATER IN A POND - IF YOU DON'T CHANGE IT - IT STAGNATES -
OH - WHAT A CLEVER MAN YOU ARE - JUST FULL OF HOMESPUN WISDOM - YOU THINK YOU'RE A REGULAR WIT - DON'T YOU? WELL - THE BEST I CAN SAY FOR YOU IS THAT YOU'RE HALF RIGHT -

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Yesterdays By Harry J. Tuthill

AN AVIATOR WHO APPEARED OPPORTUNELY IN THE DOORWAY OF A TROPICAL ISLAND CASTLE, FIRST FLEW ACROSS THE BUNGLES' PATH WHEN PEGGY WAS LEARNING TO DRIVE THE FAMILY CAR.
What, a nervy stranger introduced himself to you on the street... and you brought him home?
But Mother, he's so polite and...
TIME, AND HARTFORD OAKDALE'S FRONT LINE SKETCHES OF HIS PAST, STRENGTHENED TWO WIDELY DIFFERING FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF HIM.
At the second trench I stopped while my boys caught up with me.
Great! Stuff like that won the war.
Such slush!
THEN CAME ROMANCE, THE DISTANT MUSIC OF WEDDING BELLS, AND A ROUND TRIP AT HIGH NOON TO CHURCH.
I suspect foul play.
Oh! Oh! Gone! And I was to be so happy.
Not being married to a man like that will make you happy, honey, later on.
LATER HARTFORD CAME BACK, AND IN SPITE OF MOTHERLY WARNINGS, CONTINUED TO HIGHLIGHT A FIGURE THAT THREW TROUBLESOME SHADOWS.
But mon general, one of my boys said, only 6 of us against 400 angry natives?
Mush! But how they love it!

Orders Based On Job Giving Is Works Plan

Contracts for Materials May Be Made Contingent on Idle Relief.

By the Associated Press.

A requirement that private industries receiving orders from the $4,000,000,000 work fund fill extra jobs from relief rolls last night was reported under consideration in important Administration quarters.

Officials were said to be divided over the proposal, but some contended this was the only means available of creating employment in mining and similar areas. Others insisted that President Roosevelt would hold to his intention of putting the 3,500,000 directly to work on public projects without including jobs in supplying materials and equipment.

How much of the huge fund would be available for such purchases was said to depend on the not-yet-determined wage scales for the 320 work areas which have been set up by Harry L. Hopkins, head of the progress administration.

Higher Wage Likely.

First estimates of an average monthly payment of $50 a month would have left nearly $2,000,000,000 for supplies, but the wage will be higher because of increased food prices, officials said.

The plan proposed would trace the money expended back beyond the labor actually expended in digging a canal or building a bridge. The manufacturers of the steel and the cement used would report on "primary" indirect employment—and those supplying the coal and iron ore to make the steel on the "secondary" job-giving.

The relief problem has been complicated by two large classes of unemployed who are not slated to get jobs—those out of work but not on relief, and those on relief but members of families with some other employable persons included in the new program.

Half Not on Relief.

Hopkins estimated recently that half the unemployed were not on relief, and expectations had been that these would get the benefit of indirect employment.

The requirement that projects must fit the relief population in the particular area was acknowledge to have slowed up progress of the program, although officials said examination of applications by Hopkins' agency would remove one extra stage in getting projects approved and under construction.

Earlier announcements had said the division of applications, headed by Frank C. Walker, would check the amount of employment before submitting projects to the advisory committee on allotments.

$4,000,000 Church, A Gift, Dedicated

Overflow Congregation Attends Pittsburgh Services.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 12.—A memorial to the mothers of the donors, the $4,000,000 East Liberty Presbyterian Church, the gift of the late Richard B. Mellon and his wife, was formally dedicated today to the service of God.

Before a congregation that filled the 1,750 pew seats and overflowed into the chapel and numerous rooms, Richard King Mellon, son of the donors and nephew of Andrew W. Mellon, accepted the handwrought key from the architect and turned it over to the church building committee. The former Secretary of the Treasury was unable to come to Pittsburgh from Washington for the ceremonies.

Mrs. Richard B. Mellon, attired in black with a shoulder corsage of white gardinias, sat in a pew with her son, her daughter and her son-in-law.

Ralph Adams Cram, consulting architect of Boston, called the church a "lasting witness of the etrnal truths of Christianity." He recalled that the donors had authorized no expense be spared to build the finest church possible.

"I accept with grateful appreciation," young Mellon said, in receiving the key. He then turned it over to Charles A. Fisher for the congregation.

Catholic Laymen Urged To War on Communism

New York, May 12 (AP).—A campaign to combat communism in America and "religious persecution in Mexico" by organized Catholic laymen was advocated today by Judge Jerry B. Sullivan, of the U. S. Customs Court.

Speaking before a communion breakfast of the Holy Name Society of the United States Customs Department, Judge Sullivan asked a "pledge of loyalty to our brethren in Mexico."

The Rev. Frederick P. Le Buffe, associate editor of America, Catholic Weekly, decried the growth of communism in schools and colleges.

HER QUIVERING NERVES

A woman's nerves often get the best of her. Here is a medicine that quiets quivering nerves, makes you sleep better, gives you the extra energy you need.

Mrs. Grace Benjamin of Breesport, New York, says, "My mother told me to take your Compound. I could not be on my feet without it. My nerves are better and I am in good spirits."
